

Universiteit
Leiden
The Netherlands

The development of domestic space in the Maltese Islands from the Late Middle Ages to the second half of the Twentieth Century

Said-Zammit, G.A.

Citation

Said-Zammit, G. A. (2016, June 30). The development of domestic space in the Maltese Islands from the Late Middle Ages to the second half of the Twentieth Century. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/41440>

Version: Not Applicable (or Unknown)

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/41440>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

Cover Page

Universiteit Leiden

The handle <http://hdl.handle.net/1887/41440> holds various files of this Leiden University dissertation

Author: Said-Zammit, G.A.

Title: The development of domestic space in the Maltese Islands from the Late Middle Ages to the second half of the Twentieth Century

Issue Date: 2016-06-30

Curriculum Vitae

George A. Said-Zammit

George A. Said-Zammit was born in Sliema, Malta, in 1969. He studied at the University of Malta, graduating in 1990 (B.A. in Archaeology and Classics). Between 1992 and 1994 he read for a Master of Arts (M.A.) degree in Archaeology at the University of Durham under the supervision of Dr. J.L. Bintliff. His thesis was concerned with mortuary practices in the Punic Mediterranean, with particular reference to the Maltese islands. His thesis was published by British Archaeological Reports (B.A.R.) in 1997, entitled Population, Land Use and Settlement on Punic Malta. Between 2007 and 2009 he read for a Post-Graduate Diploma in Educational Management and Administration from the University of Malta, graduating with distinction. In 2011 he registered for a Ph.D. degree at the University of Leiden. His research was supervised by Prof. Dr. J.L. Bintliff (Faculty of Archaeology, University of Leiden) and co-supervised by Dr. H. Stöger (Faculty of Archaeology, University of Leiden).

Between 1988 and 1990 he was involved in the updating of the Malta's Antiquities List, which led to the publication of the National Protective Inventory in 1990. He was also co-supervisor in the National Coastal Survey of the Maltese islands, which was organized in 1989 by the Department of Geography of the University of Durham, in collaboration with the University of Malta. Between 1988 and 1997 he also took part in archaeological excavations in Malta and Gozo. He participated and presented papers in a number of seminars and conferences in Malta and abroad. He is the author of various published articles and studies which focus on the built heritage of the Maltese islands as well as on mortuary practices and archaeology in the Punic world. He also gave public lectures in Malta and abroad on different aspects related to the archaeology of the Maltese islands. From 1990 onwards he taught a number of credit courses at the University of Malta, both at the Faculty of Arts as well as the Faculty of Education.

For more than fifteen years Said-Zammit worked as a teacher in a private secondary school in Malta, teaching History, Latin and Environmental Studies. In 2008 he was appointed as Education Officer of Social Studies and European Studies within the Directorate for Quality and Standards in Education. In 2014 George Said-Zammit was appointed Director of the Student Services Department within the Directorate for Educational Services (Ministry for Education and Employment).