About the author

Jessie Nixon was born in Auckland, New Zealand, but soon headed south to Takamatua, Banks Peninsula, at age 2 months and then to Christchurch two years later. After graduating from the University of Canterbury with a Bachelor of Arts in Chinese and Russian (1st) and a Bachelor of Science in Linguistics (1st), she took up a scholarship at Peking University to study Chinese and Chinese Linguistics and lived in Beijing for 4 years. She completed a Master of Science in Psycholinguistics at the University of Edinburgh (with Distinction) in 2009, before beginning her PhD research at the University of Leiden in the same year. In 2014, Jessie was awarded a grant from Asian Modernities and Traditions at the University of Leiden to conduct research on tone processing in speech. She spent the summer of 2014 as a post-doctoral researcher with Harald Baayen at the University of Tübingen and is a recipient of the 2014 Endeavour Research Fellowship for the position of post-doctoral researcher at the MARCS Institute, University of Western Sydney.
