ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Finishing this book means more than just completing a PhD project: it also means a partial fulfilment of my moral obligation to share lessons of facilitating a community in having their rights on land and forest resources legally recognized by the state. The village of Langkawana in Lampung is the place which offered me this experience. The institution which enabled me to do this was the Program for Research and Development of Ecological Anthropology, University of Indonesia (Program Penelitian dan Pengembangan Antropologi Ekologi-Universitas Indonesia, P3AE-UI), where I worked for almost a decade in research and community facilitation. The position of researcher and program manager at this institute and the interaction with the Langkawana villagers have shaped my understanding about law and order, science, human beings and life. Thus, I would like to express my respect to all Langkawana villagers and my ex-colleagues at P3AE-UI: Iwan Tjitradjaja, Bediona Philipus, Keron A. Petrus, Prudensius Maring, Heriyanti O. Untoro, Slamet Riyanto, Joko Susilo, Dewi Yunita, Katijah, Nurmala and Boy.

The INDIRA Project (Indonesian-Netherlands Studies on Decentralization of the Indonesian 'Rechtstaat' and its impact on Agraria) of the Van Vollenhoven Institute of Leiden University and its Indonesian partner Andalas University provided me with the opportunity to carry out professional research, while rethinking my past involvement in NGO networks and movements of legal reform in Indonesia. This project introduced me to a type of collaboration built upon sharing, learning and support among colleagues. I would like to express my sincere gratitude to Jan Michiel Otto, as my promotor and team leader of INDIRA. I would like to thank the other researchers of the INDIRA project: the late Djaka Soehendera, Tristam Moeliono, Sandra Moniaga, Kurnia Warman, Gustaaf Reerink, Laurens Bakker, Saldi Isra, Sulastryono. Various means of communication and collaboration, listening and sharing inspired me to develop my research topic as well as to maintain our personal relations. I would also like to thank those who were always willing to comment on my research design, articles and chapters: Adriaan Bedner, Jacqueline Vel, Daniel Fitzpatrick, Jamie Davidson, Marjanne Termorshuizen-Arts, Herman Slaats, and Karen Portier. Similarly,

I am much indebted to Albert Dekker for his amazing assistance in searching and providing literature and to Hannah Mason for her assistance in language editing. To Takdir Rahmadi, Jan van Olden, Marianne Moria, Kari van Weeren, Kora Bentvelsen I am most grateful for their administrative support as well as for the personal relationship during the last seven years. I am thankful to Laure, Stijn, Herlambang, Rikardo, Anton, Ken, Maria – all PhD researchers at Van Vollenhoven Institute.

In Lampung, I am grateful to Edi Sutanto who assisted me in collecting data. Also, I would like to express my appreciation of all my informants in the villages of Gedong Gajah, Kebagusan and Mataram Raja, activists of NGOs, mainly from Watala, officials of the Provincial Forestry Service and the Regional Office of the National Land Agency, officials of the Central Lampung Forestry Service, members of Provincial and District Councils and Armein Yasser of the Law School of the University of Lampung.

The Ford Foundation at Jakarta fully supported this PhD project and research. Steve Rhee and Ujwall Pradhan were very helpful and I am much indebted to them. At the initial phase of my research, a small research grant of the Center for International Forestry Research (CIFOR) also supported me, thanks to Lini Wollenberg and Moira Moeliono. Koninklijk Nederlandse Akademie van Wetenschappen (KNAW) also supported several of my visits to Leiden for courses and seminars as part of the INDIRA project.

My colleagues at the Learning Centre HuMa (now called Epistema) took over part of my responsibilities while I was finalizing the thesis manuscript in Leiden in June 2010. I am grateful to Bernadinus Steni, Susilaningtias, Yance Arizona, Mumu Muhajir, Andi Sandhi, Sri Sudarsih, Wiwin Widayanti, Alexander Juanda Putra and Nunu Rais dos Santos. To those who at that time were the board of Perkumpulan HuMa, Julia Kalmirah, Rival G. Ahmad and again, Rikardo Simarmata and Herlambang Perdana, I thank them for allowing me to leave the Learning Centre for a while to finalize the manuscript. I would also like to express my thanks to Asep Y. Firdaus and Susi Fauziah who assisted in managing the administration of the INDIRA Project in 2006–2009.

I especially appreciate the sincerity of my husband, Hanief, and my children: Aisha Nadha Audina, Fardhian Danieal Firdaus, Bary Ali Irhamni. I apologise to them whose rights of husband and children could often not be realised during the process of writing this book. My father, Muhammad Fuad Arieph, and my mother, Rukmini, never cease to encourage in whatever I do. I am thankful to them. Similarly, my thanks also go out to my brother, Otto Syahrurah, my sister-in law, Nurul Palupi, and my sister, Ade Miranti for taking care of my children, while I was in Leiden. Finally, I recognize a very important role of two other women in my life: Ipat and Umi, who greatly supported me in domestic work. I consider them as heroes, they who have provided me with the liberty to work in the public sphere.
