Curriculum vitae

Elisavet Athanasia Alexiadou was born in Thessaloniki (Greece) in 1983. She studied law at Aristotle University of Thessaloniki (AUTH) from where she obtained her Bachelor's degree in law. She holds an LLM in Medical Law (UK) and a MSc in Management of Healthcare Units, completed with university scholarship (Greece). Her PhD research at the Law Faculty (Institute of Public Law - programme: Effective Protection of Fundamental Rights in a pluralist world) of Leiden University (NL) focuses on national implementation of the right to health.

Since 2008, she is a Member of the Thessaloniki Bar Association and since 2013 she is lawyer at Court of Appeal. She is author of numerous academic articles and four books on health law and patients' rights, being officially distributed by the Greek Ministry of Education, Research and Religious Affairs at several academic institutions in Greece and students. Her latest book is entitled 'General Principles of Health Deontology' (University Studio Press 2012).
