Acknowledgments

The great pleasure of bringing this work to an end does not make me forget the great help generously offered by many.

I am grateful for the financial support of the Prince Salman Center for Disability Research (PSCDR) which made it possible for me to conduct this research.

As for help on the scientific level, a huge number of people have been involved such as Islamologists, Muslim scholars, specialists in the field of disability studies and officials from international organizations and many others especially those affiliated to the United Nations Originations (UNO). I hereby submit my gratitude to them all and my apologies for having no space to name them all by name.

On the social level, great support has been given by many friends, again too many to list here. However, my junior colleague Abdurraouf Oueslati should be mentioned by name. His sincere and fruitful efforts spared me a lot of time and energy especially in the final stage of finishing this work.

A final note is reserved for my family. The support given by my wife and colleague Karima Joundi is too generous to be repaid. My cute twins, Maryam and Khadija, have been a very fine addition in my life which was a source of great motivation and inspiration during my work. Finally, a note of gratitude is due to my mother whose constant support, kindness and tenderness can never be duly expressed leave alone be rewarded.
