Mohammed M.I. Ghaly (b. 1976) is a lecturer of Islamic studies at Leiden University. He studied Islamic Studies in English at al-Azhar University in Egypt and got his bachelor with “Excellent with Honorary Degree” in 1999. In 2002, he received his Master degree in Islamic studies, cum laude, from Leiden University.

Scope of Research:

Mohammed Ghaly focuses mainly on the following research areas:

- Islamic Law and Theology: The main focus in this respect is to investigate the relationship between early and modern Islamic sources on one hand and the current social reality of Muslims on the other hand. The life of Muslim minorities in the West and especially in the Netherlands is the main focus of his courses on Islamic law and Ethics at Leiden University. In this regard, Ghaly participated also in the niqab (face-covering veil) committee formed by the Dutch Ministry of Justice during the period 11-30 October 2006 and wrote the chapter on “Religious Considerations on Wearing the Face-covering Veil” in the published report of that committee. Mohammed Ghaly is also interested in the field of medical ethics. He recently published a number of articles in English and Dutch on topics relevant to this field of study.
- Training Imams in the West: Mohammed Ghaly is interested in two main sides of this issue. First, the position, qualifications and tasks of imams as to be traced in the early and modern discussions of Muslim scholars. Second, to what extent the new context of imams living in the West would affect their classically defined position, qualifications and tasks. He has been participating in different conferences and seminars discussing this issue.
