Curriculum Vitæ

Anne de Hingh was born in Utrecht in 1968. She spent her childhood in Breda, in the south of the Netherlands. After finalising a Dutch Gymnasium education, she studied Classical Languages at the University of Leiden (1986-1992). During these studies she discovered archaeobotany. The following eight years she spent at the Institute of Prehistory, later Faculty of Archaeology. From 1994 until 1999 she worked as a PhD student at this faculty. From March 2000, she is working as co-ordinator of the museums of the City of Antwerp.
