African Postal Heritage

APH Paper Nr 6; part 1

Ton Dietz

Sahara: IFNI

Version January 2017

Introduction

Postage stamps and related objects are miniature communication tools, and they tell a story about cultural and political identities and about artistic forms of identity expressions. They are part of the world's material heritage, and part of history. Ever more of this postal heritage becomes available online, published by stamp collectors' organizations, auction houses, commercial stamp shops, online catalogues, and individual collectors. Virtually collecting postage stamps and postal history has recently become a possibility. These working papers about Africa are examples of what can be done. But they are work-in-progress! Everyone who would like to contribute, by sending corrections, additions, and new area studies can do so by sending an email message to the APH editor: Ton Dietz (dietzaj@asc.leidenuniv.nl). You are welcome!

1. IFNI

<http://www.stampworldhistory.com/wp-content/uploads/2015/08/Spain-Flag-2-150x100.gif>

According to Wikipedia (EN), Ifni “was a Spanish province on the Atlantic coast of Morocco, south of Agadir and across from the Canary Islands, between 1959 and 1976. It had a total area of 1,502 km² and a population of 51,517 in 1964. The main industry was fishing”.

“Spain's presence in the area can be traced to a settlement called Santa Cruz de la Mar Pequeña, founded in 1476. After attacks by the Berbers the Spanish decided to focus on colonizing other areas of North Africa and abandoned the region. In the mid-19th century the European powers looked again to Africa for resources, Spain suddenly mooted an interest in its lost medieval fortress in order to stake a claim to the southern part of Morocco. This served as a pretext for a short war with Morocco in 1859. The territory and its main town of Sidi Ifni were ceded to Spain by Morocco on 26 April 1860, but there was little interest in this colonial acquisition until 1934 when the governor-general of Spanish Sahara took up residence. During Francisco Franco's dictatorship, the colony was made into a Spanish province in order to forestall United Nations criticism of continued colonization. After the "Forgotten War" (1957) most of the territory became occupied by Morocco. Spain formally returned the territory to Morocco on 30 June 1969. The territory was integrated into the Moroccan region of Souss-Massa-Drâa”.

And: “Spain began issuing postage stamps for Ifni in 1941, initially overprinting Spanish stamps with "TERRITORIO DE IFNI", then issuing new designs in 1943. Issues followed at the rate of about ten per year with the last on 23 November 1968. Most are commonly available and are more often seen unused than used”.

Further information about the ‘forgotten war’ (1957-1958):

“The city of Sidi Ifni was incorporated into the Spanish colonial empire in 1860. The following decades of Franco-Spanish collaboration resulted in the establishment and extension of Spanish protectorates south of the city; Spanish influence obtained international recognition in the Berlin Conference of 1884. In 1946, the region's various coastal and inland colonies were consolidated as Spanish West Africa. Immediately following its independence from France in 1956, Morocco began expressing interest in the Spanish possessions, claiming it was historically and geographically part of Moroccan territory”. After a brief war in 1957-1958 “On April 2 [1958], the governments of Spain and Morocco signed the Treaty of Angra de Cintra. Morocco obtained the region of Tarfaya (Cape Juby), between the river Draa and the parallel 27° 40', excluding the colonies of Sidi Ifni and the Spanish Sahara. Spain retained possession of Ifni until 1969, when, while under some international pressure (resolution 2072 of the United Nations from 1965), it returned the territory to Morocco. Spain kept control of Western Sahara until the 1975 Green March and the Moroccan Army invasion prompted a withdrawal”.

Stamp World History writes about Ifni: "Ifni is located in northern Africa. Ifni is a Spanish enclave in southern Morocco – claimed by the Spanish to be the site of a 15th century Spanish settlement on the Moroccan coast called Santa Cruz de la Mar Pequeña. Ifni is ceded to Spain in 1860 as a result of the 1859-1860 Hispano-Moroccan war. The exact borders are defined in a treaty with the French in 1912 when the surrounding part of Morocco becomes a French protectorate. It is not until 1934 that the Spanish decide to actually establish themselves in Ifni. A military base is set up and the town of Sidi Ifni is founded to become the administrative center of the Spanish possessions in the region – aside from Ifni consisting of the colony of Spanish Sahara and the protectorate of Cape Juby – which de jure is the southern part of the protectorate of Spanish Morocco. Sidi Ifni develops rapidly in subsequent years to become a town with 50 000 inhabitants in 1960. The main economic activity in Sidi Ifni was fishing. In 1946 Ifni is grouped together with Spanish Sahara to form Spanish West Africa. After Moroccan independence in 1956 Morocco claims the Spanish possessions to the south. In 1957 Morocco engages in a military conflict to gain control of Ifni. After initial setbacks the Spanish manage to retain control over Ifni – albeit that effective control is now limited to the city of Sidi Ifni, the hinterland being controlled by Morocco. Also in 1958 Spanish West Africa is dissolved. To forestall criticism on the slow process of decolonization Ifni is proclaimed a Spanish province – as is Spanish Sahara further to the south. Ifni is returned to Morocco in 1969. Currently Sidi Ifni is a town of 20 000 inhabitants". And: "The first stamps are issued for Ifni in 1941 – these being Spanish stamps overprinted 'Territorio de Ifni'. The first set of definitives is issued in 1943. In the 1950's and 1960's Ifni issues resemble the contemporary issues in Spain and other Spanish possessions. From 1960 the issues are inscribed 'España' in a larger font and 'Ifni' in a smaller font. The last stamps of Ifni are issued in 1968. The stamps of Ifni are superseded by those of Morocco from 1969. As in Spanish Sahara stamps issued by Spanish West Africa have from 1949 to 1952 been used in Ifni concurrently with the issues of Ifni".
