

Universiteit
Leiden
The Netherlands

"This is Roosevelt's World" - FDR as a Cultural Icon in American Memory
Polak, S.A.

Citation

Polak, S. A. (2015, December 8). "This is Roosevelt's World" - FDR as a Cultural Icon in American Memory. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/36996>

Version: Corrected Publisher's Version

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/36996>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

Cover Page

Universiteit Leiden

The handle <http://hdl.handle.net/1887/36996> holds various files of this Leiden University dissertation.

Author: Polak, Sara Anne

Title: "This Is Roosevelt's World" : FDR as a cultural icon in American memory

Issue Date: 2015-12-08

“Take a look at our present world. It is manifestly not Adolf Hitler’s world. His Thousand-Year Reich turned out to have a brief and bloody run of a dozen years. It is manifestly not Joseph Stalin’s world. That ghastly world self-destructed before our eyes. Nor is it Winston Churchill’s world. Empire and its glories have long since vanished into history. The world we live in today is Franklin Roosevelt’s world.” – Arthur Schlesinger Jr., 1998.

Is today’s world Franklin Roosevelt’s? This dissertation studies the construction of Franklin Delano Roosevelt as a cultural icon in American memory, particularly by FDR himself. It inquires how the Roosevelt icon has developed diachronically and who has exerted agency over it, and it asks how that icon functions culturally and ideologically in the present. How can one contribute to one’s future image as an icon? And how can the remembrance of icons serve the present?

“This Is Roosevelt’s World” - FDR as a Cultural Icon in American Memory

Sara Polak

“This Is Roosevelt’s World”

FDR as a Cultural Icon in American Memory

Sara Polak