Qihoo v. Tencent 民三终字第 4 号(2013).The Supreme People's Court of the People's Republic of China Civil Judgment (2013)

Yu Qiang was born in Qingdao, China, in 1982. He studied Law and earned a bachelor's degree from Weifang University in 2007. In the same year, he passed the National Post-graduate Education Entrance Examination and was admitted to Hunan University Law School. After three years of study and research in international law and competition law, he obtained a masters' degree in Law in 2010. Qiang started his PhD research at the Europa Institute of Leiden University Law School in September 2010. His research focuses on regulating information goods markets under competition law rules, focusing specifically on the software market. His research analyses, in particular, the regulation of market power exercise by dominant firms in the software market.

Qiang was a guest researcher at the Max Planck Institute for Innovation and Competition (Munich) between 2013 and 2014, where he received research grants from the German Association for the Protection of Intellectual Property (GRUR) and the Max Planck Institute. He is involved in several research projects related to the intersection of competition law and intellectual property law. In 2013, his research proposal 'Open Source Software Intellectual Property Right Protection' received funding from the Shanghai Social Sciences Junior Scholar project. Since 2016, he has been a research fellow of the Skolkovo Institute for Law and Development, National Research University Higher School of Economics (Moscow). Qiang's fellowship involves examining the application of competition law in the food and agriculture markets.
