Acknowledgements

The most memorable part of my first day as a PhD candidate was my supervisor's encouragement to always be academically generous. While working on my dissertation I benefitted enormously from others who were exactly that – generous with their time, skills, insight, and support. I am immensely grateful to numerous people who were involved in various ways.

While working on my thesis I had the opportunity to participate in conferences and workshops in the Netherlands and abroad. The questions and comments which I received on those occasions helped me to refine and shape my ideas and for that I thank the many participants who freely offered their thoughts.

Thanks to the staff of archives of libraries for the work that they do to facilitate historical research. Having unearthed the sources I needed, I then enjoyed expert assistance from Lodewijk Wagenaar, Harry Dondorp and Ton Harmsen who taught me how to decipher them. I am grateful for the time you dedicated to teaching me.

Researching and writing this dissertation was a task which, thankfully, I did not have to tackle alone. Joris and Erik in the VIDI team, and Bram our adopted VIDI brother; Eli, Edgar, Julie, Kaarle and Hasan; Byapti and Noelle; Jeannette, Sanne and Marion; thank you all for your encouragement, constructive comments and suggestions which improved my thinking and writing. You have been excellent colleagues, and beyond that, great friends. Being a part of the Institute for History was a great experience, and for that I thank my colleagues in multiple sections.

I owe a great debt of gratitude to my supervisors, Cátia and Karwan. Thank you for the many hours you spent discussing my ideas, reading and rereading drafts, offering guidance and suggestions.

My heartfelt thanks to close friends in faraway places. Your friendship is a joy and treasure. Thank you for sharing the peaks and troughs of PhD life with me.

When I started my PhD my father told me that it was a test of character and perseverance. He was right. I have come through that test in no small part thanks to the patience, steadfast love and unwavering support of my parents (and their unrivalled proof-reading skills!). Thank you, Mom and Dad.
