SEYCHELLES BEFORE 1976

Version January 2019

Introduction

Postage stamps and related objects are miniature communication tools, and they tell a story about cultural and political identities and about artistic forms of identity expressions. They are part of the world's material heritage, and part of history. Ever more of this postal heritage becomes available online, published by stamp collectors' organizations, auction houses, commercial stamp shops, online catalogues, and individual collectors. Virtually collecting postage stamps and postal history has recently become a possibility. These working papers about Africa are examples of what can be done. But they are work-in-progress! Everyone who would like to contribute, by sending corrections, additions, and new area studies can do so by sending an email message to the APH editors: Ton Dietz (dietzaj@asc.leidenuniv.nl) and/or Jan Jansen (jansenj@fsw.leidenuniv.nl). You are welcome!

This is a survey of the postage stamps and postal history of Seychelles, an 115 island nation spanning an archipelago in the Indian Ocean, some 1,500 kilometres (932 mi) east of mainland Africa, northeast of the island of Madagascar. Seychelles was administered as a dependency of Mauritius from 1810 to 1903.”

First mails. From 1848, stamps of Mauritius were used on mail from Seychelles and are found with the cancel B64 from that year. The first post office in the Seychelles was opened at Victoria, on Mehe, on 11 December 1861 and stamps of Mauritius were used there until 1890. The next post office in Seychelles was not opened until 1901.”

<http://www.seychelles-post.com/images/history.jpg>: "The first post office was opened in 1861 though in 1824 a letter is said to have been "privately carried" to Europe. Until a boat service "Messagerie Maritime" took over the mail contract in 1866 mail to and from Seychelles could not be transported on a regular basis. The earliest known letter using this service was dated April 1865. Colonial reports brought out the extreme communication difficulties though in 1877, the Mauritius Post Office reported that letters to and from Seychelles numbered 14,184. The Post Office became autonomous from Mauritius in August 1882. It was in 1893 that the first local post office was introduced in Seychelles. Non-commissioned officers in charge of the Police Station acted as receiving and dispatching officers. This service was stopped in July 1894 as it proved too much for them to cope. In 1894, the new Administrator, Sweet Escot saw that the postal services needed improvement and introduced a new Inland Postal Service. The British India Steam Navigation Company also began a shipping contract in August 1895. The quarantine of ships is said to affect mail from time to time. The local postal service covered the whole population of Mahe, Praslin, La Digue, including the outer islands. In 1965, this also included the British Indian Ocean Territory. Airmail service was introduced in September 1932 but became effective in February 1938. The service was through Karachi and Nairobi. The first civil flying machine to Seychelles was in June 1939 from Australia. In 1948, the Royal Air Force established a base in Seychelles and the Catalina flying boat, operated flying services between Seychelles, Mauritius, Madagascar and Kenya. They carried mail in and out of Seychelles, but were authorized to censure mail for members of the armed forces. In January 1953, East African Airway Corporation attempted to introduce the first airmail service with an amphibian aircraft from Kenya. The service was not economical and later withdrawn. The United States Air force builds a satellite tracking station on Mahe in 1963 and introduced an amphibian service from Mombasa which carried first and second class airmail beginning August 1964. Wilkenair introduced an airmail service in May 1970, which were followed by the opening of the international airport in 1971 and a weekly mail service introduced by BOAC in July 1971. During World War I there were no regular censorship of civilian mail, but all correspondence to what was considered as enemy territory was examined by the Governor until near 1919. During World War II censorship of mail, telegrams and newspaper began. The original sensors were Government Officers, Police Officers and retired Military Officers assisted by staff from Cable & Wireless for censorship of telegrams. The Victoria Central Post office opened in 1861 as a sub-office of Mauritius and did not have postage stamps of its own and used that of Mauritius.

Seychelles after 1890<sup>1</sup>

"In 1890 named colony keyplates were issued. The Victorian locally printed surcharge errors are numerous, as are the Edwardian keyplate errors. The maritime element forms an interesting section in any postal history collection. The postage stamps since independence depict the unique flora and fauna of the whole group of islands".

On <https://www.revrevd.com/seychelles.html>: "Note: an essay for a Seychelles revenue stamp was produced on 20th May 1889, bearing the portrait of Queen Victoria and based partly on the postage stamp key types already in use in a number of British Colonies. The essay was subsequently accepted (with certain modifications), and a group of colour trials were submitted for approval on 8th August 1892. The essay, master die proof and colour trials are illustrated on the Seychelles supplementary information page. For reasons which are not now clear, the issue of this Seychelles revenue key type was either cancelled or delayed until after the death of Queen Victoria. The requirement for revenue adhesives during the 1890s was instead supplied by the use of Mauritius Internal Revenue stamps overprinted Seychelles, and supplemented with locally-produced provisionals on postage stamps".

The date of issue is unknown but may be inferred from the specimen set (illustrated on this page), which consists of single stamps stuck on individual pieces of card. Three values have manuscript annotations giving the date of production - "Dec 1892" for the 5c, "June 94" for the 12c and "Jan 03" for the 10c. The other values are undated but probably belong with the 5c. All values have the D12 specimen overprint except the later 10c, which has overprint type D16. The earliest recorded usage of this issue is 1894 (25c), 1897 (5c) and 1898 (50c). The latest recorded usage is 1912 (25c). 2. Morley and Forbin list reprints of the above issue with wider spaced watermark, all values appearing on both types of paper except the 2r50c and 5r (narrow only) and the 10c (wide only). The different types of watermark are not considered to be significant by most collectors today, and I do not feel sufficient confidence in distinguishing them to list them here. 3. The 10c and 12c were not issued without Seychelles overprint. The essay for the 12c value was erroneously inscribed TWELVE RUPEES".

W Morley, Catalogue of the Revenue Stamps of the British Colonies including Railway Stamps (2nd edition, privately published, 1910)

Despite being over 100 years old, Morley's catalogue is still one of the best listings of Mauritius and Seychelles revenues ever published. Morley was the first to describe the different settings of the Crown CA watermark, making his listing more specialised than is required by the majority of revenue philatelists today.

In addition to the published resources listed on the main Asia page, I would like to express my special gratitude to Mike Bending of I B Stamps and to collectors Nigel Jeffries, Bruce Dickey, John Hawes, Muhammin Khamisa, Martin Lipczer, Tony Stockdale, Kevin Turner and John Wakeman, who generously provided many of the images for this listing. Many thanks also to Eric Hutton, Editor of the Indian Ocean Study Circle's IO-Bulletin, who provided additional scans and access to new information I had not come across myself".

The date of issue given here is based on earliest recorded usage (August 1896 for the 5c and 1898 for the remaining cents values), though the stamps may have been issued with the Internal Revenue series (R1/9) several years earlier. Overprint proofs for both issues are found on the same piece from the printer's archive, suggesting that the two issues were produced at the same time. The earliest recorded usage of the 1r25c is 1910 though I presume it was issued with the rest of the set; 2. Barefoot lists both narrow and wide watermark settings on all the above values, though Morley only lists wide setting on the Seychelles issue, and I have not seen any with the narrow setting to date. Narrow should exist only if the stamps were issued before 1894; 3. Examples of the 5c, 10c and 25c can be found with the duty plate in a range of shades from carmine to maroon, which may indicate separate printings though may simply be the result of fading. Morley lists two shades each of the 5c and 10c but I follow Forbin in ignoring them".

Then, adding new values and color changes, a twelve stamp issue was produced in 1941-49 on chalky paper, and a sixteen stamp issue was produced in 1942-45 on ordinary paper. The "Coco-de-mer" is also known as the sea coconut or double coconut. It is endemic to the islands of Praslin and Curieuse in the Seychelles. It is mainly found in the National Parks on those islands. Fortunately, the Seychelles have been careful with their indigenous flora, and, as a World Heritage Site, a third of the area is now protected.". "

2) Analysis

As a British colony, the Seychelles almost always used the head of the queens (Victoria, Elisabeth II) or Kings (Edward VII, George V, and George VI) on its postage stamps: they did that on 87% of all stamps. The only real exceptions are a series of four stamps, issued in 1949, and celebrating the 75th anniversary of the UPU, and ten postage due stamps with only numerical symbols. Other exceptions (since 1969) are occasions when not the head of the Queen but her initials EIIR and a Crown were symbolizing colonial rule. Of the 600 different images of the 357 postage and postage due stamps issued by the Seychelles during Colonial rule (many stamps had more than one type of image), 52% were images showing British royalty. Before 1937 these were the only images used; afterwards other types of images were added to either the head of the king or queen or the royal symbol. It started with some buildings, tortoises (the national animal), trees, and fishing boats, but gradually other images have been used as well. Most popular were images of boats (6% of all images, and important for a colony that consists of islands), trees and flowers (5% of all images), and – although remarkably late – historical images (5% as well). British heroes like Winston Churchill take a prominent place, but also rather romantic images of a history of piracy. Globes and maps are popular as well (with 4% of all images during Colonial rule). And the tortoise makes a regular appearance; also because it features on the coat of arms of the Seychelles during colonial times. Until very late, the images do not show ‘politics’, or social issues. Only in 1975 stamps were issued showing ‘self-government’, and also in 1975 a series of eight stamps asked attention for women’s rights. And stamps referring to the islands’ history are few, and (with the exception of the images of pirates on some regular stamps, and a few repeated images of a former governor) deal with the first landing on Praslin Island in 1768 (in 1968), and the first settlement on Saint Anne Island in 1770 (in 1970). In APH32 we will include an analysis of the way Independent Seychelles started to use a different portfolio of images, and how that became different from the British colonial repertoire of images on postage stamps of the Seychelles.
