1 Introduction: Homogeneity and Diversity in the Pre-colonial Caribbean 15
The pan-Caribbean theory 16
Problems with categorization 19
Network concepts and network models 23
Hidden network models in Caribbean archaeology 30
Networks of "people" and networks of "pots" 33
Aims and questions 37
Outline 38

2 A Dynamic Island World: The Northeastern Caribbean 41
Geography 42
A diverse geology and ecology 47
Maritime technology and voyaging 50
Culture history 54
Foundation: 6000/4000 BC - 2000 BC 55
Development: 2000-800 BC 57
Continuity: 800-200 BC 58
Transition: 200 BC-AD 400 60
Waxing and waning of inter-regional interaction: AD 400-600/800 62
Increasing density and complexity: AD 600/800-1492 64
Cultural, linguistic and ethnic (self-)identification 67
Ontology 70
Substrates and processes of pre-colonial networks 73

3 Archaeology as a Network Science: Basic Concepts and Measures 77
The embedding of network science in archaeology 78
Key concepts and operation 84
2-mode networks and ego-networks 88
Measuring and visualizing networks 91
Measures of the network as a whole 94
Subgraphs 95
Centrality 97
Network explorations 99

4 Ties that Matter, Matter that Ties: A Theoretical Framework for Socio-material Network Studies 101
Society and material culture 103
Mind over matter? 107
The gift: a material total social fact 110
The interdependency of persons and gifts 114
Kula: from gift relations to socio-material network 119
Object perspectivism and socio-material interdependency 124
A Maussian and Amerindian ontological framework 128

5 A Heart of Stone: Lithic Networks from 3200 BC to AD 400 131
Nodes and ties 133
Period A: foundation 136
Structure and subgraphs 137
Interpretation 138
Period B: growth 139
Structure and subgraphs 139
Interpretation 141
Period C: transition 142
Structure, subgraphs and centrality 144
Interpretation 146
Period D: robust networks 148
Structure, subgraphs and centrality 149
Interpretation 152
Period E: emulation 153
Structure, subgraphs and clique strength 154
Centrality 157
Interpretation 161
Longitudinal trajectories of lithic production and distribution networks 164
The dynamics of lithic networks 168

6 Remotely Local: Ego-networks of Late Pre-colonial (AD 1000-1450) Saba 173
Northeastern Caribbean geographic networks continued 176
Local, region and interregional ties at Kelbey's Ridge 2 179
The ego-network of Kelbey's Ridge 2 185
Relational models at Kelbey's Ridge 2 189
Beyond the Ego 193

7 Caciques and their Collectives: An Ethnohistoric View of Political Networks 195
Cacical networks: a fragmentary archaeological view 197
Cacical networks: a view from ethnohistory 201
Cacical nodes and ties 202
Cacical network structure and strategy 207
Triadic roots of the cacical collective 210
The complexity of the cacicazgo 215

8 Familiar Faces: The Diverse Design of Guaízas and their Use as Gifts 219
Depictions of the face in the pre-colonial Caribbean 221
Guaízas as socio-cosmic nodes 224
Guaízas as gifts 227
Guaíza design as a network 231
Antillean political economies and face-depicting valuables 241

9 Conclusion: Connecting the Caribbean 245
A brief review 245
Network approaches evaluated 248
Socio-material networks: (Un)necessary dualism? 255
Culture History 2.0? 258
The Connected Caribbean: first forays into 6000 years of networked histories 261

List of figures

1.1	A "word cloud" of the first chapter of La Isla que se repite	19
1.2	The culture history of the Northeastern Caribbean	22
1.3	A network of the connections between ceramic assemblages	23
1.4	Five examples of network models	24
1.5	Four "hidden" network models in archaeological theory	32
2.1	Map of the Northeastern Caribbean	45
2.2	PPA-network of the Northeastern Caribbean islands	46
3.1	A seriation network by Flinders Petrie	79
3.2	From archaeological assemblage to network	82
3.3	From matrix to network visualization	82
3.4	From matrix to 2-mode network	90
3.5	The ego-network of site K in Chremanesia	91
5.1	Local stone of the Northeastern Caribbean	124
5.2	Map of sites with codes	132
5.3	2-mode network of Period A	134
5.4	2-mode network of Period B	137
5.5	2-mode network of Period C	140
5.6	Affiliation (site to site) network of Period D	143
5.7	2-mode network of Period D	145
5.8	Affiliation (site to site) network of Period D	148
5.9	Interpretive, directed network of Period D	150
5.10	2-mode network of Period E	150
5.11	Affiliation (site to site) network of Period E	154
5.12	Directed network of Period E with preferential attachment	155
5.13	Directed network of Period E without preferential attachment	158
5.14	A longitudinal view of the 2-mode networks	159
6.1	MDN of the Northeastern Caribbean	163
6.2	Features and finds at Kelbey's Ridge 2	177
6.3	Ego-network of Kelbey's Ridge 2	181
6.4	Ego-network of Spring Bay 3	186

7.1	A political pyramid as a network	191
7.2	Fragmented network of Higuey's ceramic distribution	199
7.3	Model of political organization of three cacical collectives	201
8.1	Various face-depicting artefacts from the Greater Antilles	208
8.2	Examples of face-depicting shells or guaízas	219
8.3	A 2-mode network of basic elements of shell faces	225
8.4	2-mode network of detailed elements of shell faces	232
8.5	The dense affiliation network of shell face design	233
8.6	Affiliations in shell face from Banés	236
8.7	A network of the most strongly affiliated shell faces	237

List of Tables

3.1	Site nodes in the Chremanesian network	83
3.2	Different measures of network centrality in Chremanesia	84
5.1	The subgraphs of the affiliation network of Period E	156
5.2	The centralities of nodes in the directed networks of period E	160
7.1	Shifts in status centrality in cacical collectives	209
8.1	The design elements of shell faces	234
8.2	Top 10 of the best connected shell faces	239
