The ethnographic research on which this dissertation is based has brought me to Aceh, where many people welcomed me, told me their stories and allowed me to experience life together. I express my most profound gratitude to all the people in Aceh who assisted me and who taught me about (post-disaster) life in countless ways.

Although I cannot name everyone who helped me in Aceh, my host families deserve special mention. I owe unending thanks to my host parents, Bapak Drs. H. Syafrawi Umar, MM. and Ibu Hj. Nurjannah, Bapak Usman, SE. and Ibu Enung Nurullah, S.Sos., and my host brothers and sisters Mohd. Meidiansyah and Maya Carlina, Mohd. Ichsan and Ria Mazayanti, Jhony Syafwandinata and Rilla Mardian, Novia Mardhatillah, Mohd. Ade Ilham, and Mohd. Kautsar, for their hospitality, generosity, patience, encouragements and wise lessons, but most of all for allowing me into their lives and for giving me a home in Aceh. Jinan Khansa Maryam and Neisya Siti Lathifa have brought even more happiness into my Acehnese families. I thank my extended host family members – my grandmothers, uncles, aunts and cousins – for their support and the warm welcome that they have always given me. Many neighbors and friends in Aceh have not only helped me with the research but have also made all my visits to Aceh into extremely pleasant experiences. I especially thank: Kacut, Dedek, Fitri, Anita, Nora and Zaky, Ana, Erna, Muchlys, and their families.

My fieldwork was made possible by financial support from the Catherine van Tussenbroek Fonds, the Leiden University Fund, and the Aceh Research Training Institute. In Aceh I enjoyed the professional assistance as well as the personal support of Prof. M. Hasbi Amiruddin and his staff at IAIN Ar-Raniry. I offer them my sincere thanks. Prof. Bakti Setiawan has been of great help in Yogyakarta. I much appreciate the support of many people at ARTI, ICAIOS, Universitas Syiah Kuala, IAIN Ar-Raniry and the Aceh Institute. I especially thank Mirza Hasan and Eka Srimulyani for their assistance. For many helpful conversations, warm friendship and intellectual companionship I am deeply indebted to Dan Birchok, Cut Dewi, David Kloos and Catherine Smith; my Aceh research ‘cohort’.

Leiden has been a wonderful place to write my dissertation. First and foremost, I am very thankful to Patricia Spyer for her inspiring support and guidance, for her many insightful and challenging comments and for teaching me a most valuable anthropological way of seeing. I thank Peter Nas for motivating me to start with this project. Over the last years I have greatly enjoyed the support and companionship of my colleagues at the CNWS and the Institute of Cultural Anthropology and Development Sociology and I am grateful to all of them for their many suggestions and encouragements and for providing me with such a stimulating academic environment.

Outside Leiden, Mary Steedly, Michael Feener, and Freek Colombijn have provided me with welcome comments, for which I thank them. I express my heartfelt gratitude to Sylvia Tidey and David Kloos for supporting me throughout the fieldwork and writing process in many ways. Their careful readings of large parts of the manuscript and their much appreciated suggestions have enriched this dissertation.

My friends and family have played a vital role in this project from the start. I thank them for always supporting me and for their many encouragements and advices. I am very grateful to my parents, Jan Samuels and Sita van Zweeden, and my brother, Willem Samuels, for their love and support.

Anton, thank you for always sharing the ordinary and the extraordinary with me. Your inspiring creativity infuses every page of this dissertation.
