CURRICULUM VITAE

After her graduation in 1982 from Gymnasium A at Theresialyceum in Tilburg, Nicole van Os went to study Anthropology at Nijmegen University. After the first year, she combined this with the newly developed programme of Middle Eastern Studies. She graduated from the last in November 1987. From December 1987 until July 1988, she spent in Istanbul with a grant from the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research (NWO) to explore the possibilities of doing research on Ottoman women in preparation of writing a research proposal. The research proposal resulted in 1990 in another grant to work as a researcher at Nijmegen University (now, Radboud University Nijmegen). In 1994 Nicole moved to Istanbul to start teaching at the newly founded Koç University. She continued doing her research on Ottoman women, while teaching. From 2000 until 2004 she worked at Istanbul Bilgi University, where she set up and co-managed a joint MA programme in European Union Studies of Leiden University and Istanbul Bilgi University.

Since her return to the Netherlands in July 2004, she has been working as a study co-ordinator at Leiden University, while continuing to publish regularly on women in the late Ottoman Empire.
