Acknowledgements

The author would like to thank a number of individuals that have offered their inputs to this research. First and foremost, I would like to acknowledge the unselfish guidance and tireless assistance from my first supervisor Prof. Madeleine O. Hosli. Her constructive suggestions on the structure and substance of this dissertation have been proven very useful. I am also grateful to her unwavering encouragement throughout the whole period of my research, without which the completion of this dissertation would be unthinkable.

Equal gratitude must go to Dr. Daniela Stockmann, who has not only provided valuable insights on the methodology in the early stages of my study, but also offered me a research-assistant job, through which my statistical analysis skills have moved up another notch.

This current project has benefited from the "Decision Making in the European Union Before and After Lisbon" (DEUBAL) programme. Thanks to Prof. Hosli, I was able to present my preliminary findings in the DEUBAL workshops. I shall thank all of the participants of those meetings for their friendly criticism and helpful feedback.

Finally my warmest gratitude goes to my parents for their financial backing of my research, and more importantly, for their persistent love and support that has sustained me through the most difficult moments.
