

Universiteit
Leiden
The Netherlands

Digging holes abroad. An ethnography of Dutch archaeological research projects abroad.

Linde, S.J. van der

Citation

Linde, S. J. van der. (2012, December 18). Digging holes abroad. An ethnography of Dutch archaeological research projects abroad. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/20406>

Version: Corrected Publisher's Version

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/20406>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

Cover Page

Universiteit Leiden

The handle <http://hdl.handle.net/1887/20406> holds various files of this Leiden University dissertation.

Author: Linde, Sjoerd Jaap van der

Title: Digging holes abroad. An ethnography of Dutch archaeological research projects abroad

Issue Date: 2012-12-18

Acknowledgements

A short while ago I read in a column in the NRC Handelsblad that undertaking a PhD research is a privilege. That is unmistakably true. Having the opportunity to focus on one specific research topic for several years and to travel the world and discuss your ideas with peers, friends and the general public, can only be described as pure luxury, for which I am truly grateful.

I first of all wish to thank Prof. Willem Willems for supporting me over the last five years, and for presenting me with trust and opportunities to undertake my research and to develop my career. Willem, I am glad that we are still working together on unfolding our vision and passion with a shared sense of humour, and I look forward to continue doing this in the future.

I also wish to express my sincere gratitude to Prof. Jaap Lengkeek, for asking me difficult questions and for opening up his home and providing continuous support. Jaap, I am especially grateful for showing me how long walks in the open air are the best remedy for regaining a sharp view on difficult matters; a helpful tradition that I continued myself at our family home at Terschelling.

I also would like to thank my paranymphs Rutger Colenbrander and Tim Williams. Tim, thank you so much for your warm friendship and your help over the years. I wouldn't be here without you. Colen, bedankt mien jong – especially for coming all the way from the Congo to stand at my side in a penguin suit.

Furthermore, I would like to thank Dr. Monique van den Dries and Dr. Martijn Duineveld for supporting me during these last years as colleagues and friends, and for critically discussing archaeological heritage matters. I also would like to thank Prof. Peter Pels and Prof. Raymond Corbey for opening up my view into the field of anthropology and ethnography, Prof. Ian Lilley for introducing me to a whole new world of cultural resource management and capacity building, and Prof. George Smith for his moral support.

A special thanks goes to Prof. Corinne Hofman and Dr. Menno Hoogland, who provided me with the opportunity to critically investigate their project activities, and with the trust to follow up on their contacts, networks and even internal correspondence. I can't say enough how much I admire this, and I hope we can continue our collaborations in the future.

I also would like to express my sincere gratitude to Dr. Gerrit van der Kooij for allowing me to critically investigate his endeavours, and for the long discussions, the hospitality and the feedback over the past years. Gerrit, thank you so much for the warm friendship you offered, especially during my fieldwork.

In Curacao, I especially like to thank Ieteke Witteveen, Claudia Kraan and Edward Jonkheer for their help, for facilitating my research in such detail, and for placing their trust in me to investigate some of their work – I am ever so grateful for this. I also would like to thank all members and staff of NAAM, DROV, Santa Barbara Plantation, the Archaeological Working Group, AMA and BONAI for their help, and especially Dr. Jay Havisser for his enthusiasm, discussions and help in background research.

In Jordan, I would like to thank Prof. Zeidan Kafafi, Prof. Moawiyeh Ibrahim and Dr. Fawwaz Alkhraysheh for being so honest and open, as well as the staff, students and colleagues from the DoA, DASAS, YU, the CBRL and the Friends of Archaeology in Amman. A special word of gratitude goes to the wonderful people of Deir Alla and surroundings, especially to Amer who helped me with translations in the field, and to all my fellow team members of the Deir Alla Project in 2009. For Palestine, a special word of thanks goes to Dr. Hamdan Tahan and Mr. Harry Putker.

The list of people, organisations and respondents in Curacao, Jordan and Palestine that I would like to thank is simply too great to include them all here, but I would like to use this opportunity to express my gratitude to everybody who took the time to answer my questions, and who were willing to contribute to this research.

I would further like to thank David de Bruijne and Adam Jagich for their awesome support as friends and partners in crime, as well as my other colleagues of CommonSites, Claartje and Krijn, for taking over work when the need was greatest. I also would like to thank Lucienne for offering me a place to work at the Van Ostadestraat and Stijn from Profysio for making the PhD also physically bearable. Steven, a special word of thanks to you – sorry for crashing up your car, but I am glad to say I finally made it, not in the least because you gave me an opportunity all those years ago.

My colleagues in Leiden also deserve a special word of thanks, especially Claske en Corijanne for helping me with references, for providing feedback on parts of the dissertation and for being such wonderful colleagues to work with. Joanne and Hans I would like to thank for their last-minute help with the publication. Ilone, Claudia and Roswitha I like to thank for administrative issues and for making daily practicalities much more fun, and Brittany, Carrie, Raed, Kay, Alexander, Lizzy, Alexandra, Rivke, Robert, Annette, Sebastiaan, Jimmy and Alex for sharpening my mind or for offering their feedback and advice on specific parts of my research.

Finally, a warm word of thanks to my friends and family, especially to Wouter, Jaro, Merijn, Michel, Anna and Cecily. Dear Arjen, Peter, Sascha, Saskia, Feike, het nieuwe mannetje; glad to have you here to celebrate this together. Lieve Janne, I could not have done this without you and your smile.

Finally, I would like to thank my mother for her love. I wish dad could be here.

From him, I learned that Leiden is not the centre of the world and that it is worthwhile to observe things from a little distance.

I dedicate this book to my father.

Curriculum Vitae

Sjoerd Jaap van der Linde was born on the 8th of March 1979 in Heerenveen, the Netherlands. After receiving his VWO diploma at the Praedinius Gymnasium in Groningen in 1997, he successfully completed his propaedeutic degree in Architecture at the TU Delft in 1999. Sjoerd continued to study at the Faculty of Archaeology at Leiden University, where he obtained a BSc summa cum laude in Archaeological Sciences in 2003. Subsequently, Sjoerd studied at the Institute of Archaeology at University College London (UCL), where he graduated cum laude with a MA in Managing Archaeological Sites in 2004. His MA dissertation on management strategies for the UNESCO World Heritage Site of Ancient Merv was awarded the UCL Petrie Prize.

After an internship at the UNESCO World Heritage Centre in Paris, Sjoerd returned to London from 2005 to 2007, where he worked as a Research Assistant Managing Archaeological Sites at UCL, as Interpretation Officer Stonehenge at English Heritage, and as Head of Site Management & Interpretation at the UCL Centre for Applied Archaeology.

In 2007, Sjoerd started as a researcher at the Faculty of Archaeology at Leiden University, the Netherlands. During subsequent years, Sjoerd combined his PhD research on 'Digging Holes Abroad' with fieldwork at the Tell Balata Archaeological Park Project in Palestine, as well as with his function as electronic review editor for the journal Conservation and Management of Archaeological Sites (CMAS). Moreover, Sjoerd was a researcher in the EU Culture 2007 'Archaeology in Contemporary Europe' (ACE) project, where he co-edited the volume 'European Archaeology Abroad', which entails a comparative analysis of European archaeological policies and practices in foreign contexts.

Presently, Sjoerd is an Assistant Professor at the Faculty of Archaeology at Leiden University in the field of archaeological heritage management, as well as General Director of the Foundation CommonSites. His research interests include heritage management, ethnographic research and new media applications in community archaeology.

