Foreword

During my first stay in Cairo as a student of Arabic, I spent much of my spare time wandering through the medieval parts of the city, visiting the vast numbers of religious and scholarly foundations. I remember being struck by the multitude of the surviving Mamluk mosques, madrasas, mausoleums and sabīl-kuttābs that are still in use by the local population. Their imposing façades and lofty entrance portals in addition to the use of two-tone masonry (white–red or white–black) easily called for my attention. It was fascinating to find these monumental buildings standing in the midst of the bustling streets of popular neighbourhoods. Besides being fascinated, I was also somewhat annoyed: I recall the difficulty of capturing façades photographically as I could not stand back far enough in the narrow streets.

A few years later my interest in Islamic metalwork was kindled when I studied a private collection of metalwork magic bowls engraved with Arabic inscriptions, made for the benefit of those who had fallen ill. My interest in metalwork was further stimulated during volunteer work in the Ashmolean Museum in Oxford and the Rijksmuseum in Amsterdam. Studying metalwork artefacts from various periods, I noticed again that the objects from the Mamluk period with their bold calligraphy caught my eye most frequently. Eventually I chose to combine these two interests, for metalwork fittings in Mamluk architecture had not yet gained wide scholarly attention. Moreover, the topic was captivating for it not only necessitated fieldwork in Cairo, Damascus, Aleppo, Jerusalem, and Tripoli, but it also gave me the opportunity to study metalwork objects in the context for which they were originally intended.

I enjoyed – and benefited from – my discussions with colleagues, friends, and practitioners of metalworking among whom are Maaïke van Berkel, David Beiles, Kees van Gool, Stefan Heidemann, Martin Hense, François Hoek, Mat Immerzeel, Marieke Mols, and Rachel Ward. On a more daily basis, I recall with great pleasure the numerous conversations with my colleagues and friends at the Leiden based Research School CNWS, among whom especially Mariëtte van Beek, Aucke Forsten, Janneke Jansen, Jos van Lent, Sabine Luning, and Laila al-Zwaini. In addition to this, I owe a great debt of gratitude to those individuals that the Leiden mores forbid me to mention.

While extending my search for Mamluk metalwork fittings to museum collections, the following museums and their staff kindly allowed me either to work on the fittings in their collections or were generous in giving information: director Rif‘at ‘Abd al-‘Azīm and the staff of the Museum of Islamic Art in Cairo; director Philip Halim and Ashraf Nageh of the Coptic Museum in Cairo; Mona Muadhan of the National Museum in Damascus; Almut von Gladiss and Claus-Peter Haase of the Museum für Islamische Kunst in Berlin; Mariam Rosser–Owen of the Victoria & Albert Museum in London; Sue Kaoukji from the Dār al-Āthār al-Islāmīyah, Kuwait National Museum in Kuwait; Kjeld von Folsach of The David Collection in Copenhagen; and Gabriele Teichmann of the Oppenheim Estate in Cologne. My fieldwork in Egypt was enthusiastically facilitated by Muḥammad ‘Abd al-Laṭīf of the Supreme Council of Antiquities. I would like to thank him for his generous support.

My fieldwork in the Middle East and my visits to various museums in Europe were financially supported by the following organisations: The Research School of Asian, African and Amerindian Studies

(CNWS) of Leiden University; Leiden University Fund (LUF), Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research (NWO), and Het Oosters Instituut. I would like to thank them for their generous support.

Furthermore, I would like to thank the staff of the Research School CNWS and the staff of the Department of Languages and Cultures of the Middle East of Leiden University for their warm support over the years. Moreover, the hospitality I enjoyed in both the Netherlands Flemish Institute in Cairo (NVIC) and the Netherlands Institute for Academic Studies in Damascus (NIASD) has been greatly appreciated. I would like to thank their staff for their help, stimulation and enthusiastic response.

In addition, I would like to thank my parents Theo and Hanneke Mols–van Gool who have always shown a strong interest in my work and who taught me the essentials of looking at objects. Kalli Tsitsiloni joined me on numerous visits to mosques and madrasas in Damascus and Aleppo during our time off from the restoration project concerning the icons at the monastery of Saydnāyā in Syria in which we were involved: I greatly enjoyed her company and admire her for her patience. Furthermore, I am very grateful to Dorothy Wessels Boer–Stallman for her comments regarding my English – any mistakes that remain are mine, of course – and her energetic approach to face the challenges that came up during the process of making the manuscript ready for publication. To be able to discuss the different stages of the project with her was really encouraging and enjoyable.

Finally, my heartfelt thanks goes to my husband Harold van der Weegen who encouraged me throughout the writing of this thesis, who learned to appreciate Mamluk art and architecture in the process, and through whom I was able to put my work into perspective. It is to him that I dedicate this study.
