Title: Worlds full of signs. Ancient Greek divination in context

Issue Date: 2013-02-14

Appendix 1: terminology

This is a selective list of main vocabulary used in relation to divination. Names of compendia and methods of divination have been left out – these are discussed within the context of the argument above. I have followed the Chicago Assyrian Dictionary (CAD), Oxford Latin Dictionary and Liddell, Scott and Jones and provided the main meanings of the word in its relationship to divination with a number of nuances and additions according to the way they are referred to in the main text (e.g., the word ‘omen’ has been replaced by the word ‘sign’ in the translations). The actual dictionaries should be referred to for more extensive meanings, derivatives and connections between words.

Akkadian

I have restricted this list to those words attested in the Neo-Assyrian period, unless otherwise indicated.

Amūtu (A1&2)	1. Liver (general), liver used during divination, liver model. 2. Sign.
