Curriculum vitae

İsmail Çağlar, born in Istanbul on May 10, 1983, obtained his BA degree from the Sociology Department of Middle Eastern Technical University in 2006. In the same year he was accepted as an MPhil student at Leiden University's Turkish Studies Department. Following his graduation from the MPhil program in 2008, he continued as a Ph.D. Candidate in the same department. In the meantime, he conducted sociological and historical researches, including a research project on university students in Europe who graduated from Turkish imam-hatip high schools. The research report is under editorial revision at Amsterdam University Press for publication under the title: "From Symbolic to Physical Diasporas: Turkish Imam-Hatip High School Graduates in European Universities". During this research process he was employed as a junior researcher by the Religious Studies Department at Utrecht University.
