ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The following PhD dissertation is the result of a long and continuous work, which was made possible with the support, advice and persistence of several exceptional individuals.

First and foremost I would like to thank my promoters prof. dr. J.J.L. Gommans and dr. J.H.C. Kern for their trust in my ability to bring this project to a successful end. I would also like to thank them for the patience and invaluable advice, without which the dissertation would not have been possible. I also express my gratitude to the promotiecommissie for their advice, remarks and criticism.

I would like to express my sincere gratitude to my wife Desislava Mihaylova – without her endless support and her editorial work on the manuscript it would have remained a mess of ideas. Her assistance and persistence during these five years of hard work have been essential for the progress of the current study and I cannot thank her enough for putting as much passion in this work as I did.

I would like to thank Ms. Marijke van Wissen and drs. Hans Wilbrink for their support and invaluable help, without which this dissertation would not have been possible.

Finally, I would also like to thank prof. dr. Brian Davies, prof. dr. Igor Kurukin and dr. Gábor Ágoston for their support during the search for primary sources on the Southern Campaigns. Their help and advice have provided me with invaluable sources of information, from which the current dissertation benefited greatly.

A NOTE ON TRANSLITERATION

Ottoman Turkish has been transliterated using modern Turkish orthography according to Faroqhi, S. N. and K. Fleet (eds), The Cambridge History of Turkey, vol. 1-3 (Cambridge University Press, 2006). In the case of Arabic and Persian words the transliteration system applied in Jackson, P. and L. Lockhart (eds), The Cambridge History of Iran, vol.6 – The Timurid and Safavid Periods (Cambridge, 1986) is applied in this thesis, but diacritical marking of long vowels has not been used. Giving the different scholarly traditions in transliteration used in the above mentioned works, some terms (for example, vizier) have been given under the most familiar form.

All Cyrillic names and terms will be transliterated according to the following table.

Russian	English	Remarks
а	a
б	b
в	v
г	g	As in ‘get’
д	d
е or ё	ye/e	The Russian ‘e’ is pronounced ‘ye’(as in ‘yes’), and wherever a Russian ‘e’ follows a vowel, it has been transliterated as ‘ye’. If ‘e’ follows a consonant, that consonant is soft in Russian.
ё	yo	yo as in ‘yonder’
ж	zh	As the ‘s’ in ‘pleasure’
з	z
и or i	i
й	y	The English letter ‘y’ has been used for both ‘й’ and ‘ы’. However, as ‘ы’ never follows a vowel and ‘й’ never follows a consonant, no confusion can arise.
к	k
л	l
м	m
н	n
о	o
п	p
р	r
с	s
т	t

у	u	As ‘oo’ in ‘boot’
ф or θ	f
х	kh
ц	ts
ч	ch
ш	sh
щ	shch
ы	y	The English letter ‘y’ has been used for both ‘ÿ’ and ‘ы’. However, as ‘ы’ never follows a vowel and ‘ÿ’ never follows a consonant, no confusion can arise.
э	e
ю	yu
я	ya
ь	y	Soft consonants – wherever soft consonant is followed by a vowel, the vowel is preceded by ‘y’ in the English rendering.
