Title: Theatre as truth practice: Arthur Miller's The Crucible - a play waiting for the occasion

Issue Date: 2014-12-09

Acknowledgments

I came to Leiden in 2006 on the Higher Education Commission of Pakistan's funding to pursue my PhD. There was conceivable pride in my mood. The expectation was that in a Western university things would be smooth like a stream and I would be able to float my research project quite easily. However there were 3 long years of course work before my research project finally got under way. In this journey there were many people who accompanied me and I am extremely thankful to all of them for sharing their time with me.

The completion of this doctoral dissertation project was certainly not a solitary intellectual endeavor. I'll specially like to put a word of thanks for my promoter Prof. Dr. Frans-Willem Korsten who took reins of my research project in 2009. His involvement has been extremely thorough as he introduced me to all those new concepts and scholars in my field that I will keep on studying in the future. Without his motivation and formal and informal advice, I might have struggled to cope with the stress that is native to almost every longer term research project. He surely has been an inspirational figure due to his cheerfulness and hospitality.

I will also be very grateful to Dr. Yasco Horsman, whose feedback in the final phases of my work was extremely useful in simplifying the line of my argument in the book. He raised some critical questions in my first finished draft that I tried to address later on. They helped me synthesize my argument further.

A special word of thanks goes to, first, Karen Tengberg-Moyes who edited the first draft and, second, to my colleague Sara Polak who checked the very last draft of my manuscript. At LUCAS, I must mention Lia ten Brink who has been incredibly helpful and pleasant throughout my stay. Her input in designing the final layout of this dissertation has been enormous. I should also thank Viola Stoop and institute manager Korrie Korevaart for their help throughout my stay in LUCAS.

Education in a foreign country is impossible without financial resources. I am indebted to the Higher Education Commission of Pakistan for awarding me with the financial support to work on this research project. I am thankful to Mr. Marcos who employed me as a freelance translator at a time when I desperately needed funds to continue my studies. Thanks again to Korrie Korevaart for arranging partial financial support for me to be able to focus on my research for half a year.

I am very thankful to my international friends who I met during my stay in Leiden and who had some extremely fruitful discussions with me in the café of the Leiden University Library and elsewhere in the premises. They certainly changed my worldview over the years. Special thanks to all my Pakistani friends (the HEC scholars) in Leiden and other cities of the Netherlands who constituted a family-like network here.

Last, but by no means the least, I am immensely grateful to my parents, my in-laws and the rest of the family members who persevered with me despite delay in the winding up of my project. Their patience is worth gold.

I am particularly thankful to my wife Asma Salam who joined me in Leiden (in June 2012) six months after our marriage. A medical doctor by profession, she has been a very sober influence in my personal and scholarly life in Leiden.

Within a year of her stay she won a faculty scholarship from the Government of Pakistan to pursue her one year Masters in Ageing and Vitality in Leiden. Both of us finished our projects in the summer of 2014 and then came the most awesome blessing in our household: Daim Aamir, our first child. Since his arrival, life is purposeful and there is a flavour of success and happiness in it too. With immense gratitude, I dedicate this dissertation to Daim Aamir and Asma Salam for being my companions in every moment that we live together.

Curriculum Vitae

Aamir Aziz was born and raised in Faisalabad (20 December, 1983), Pakistan. After finishing his school and college education from Divisional Public School and Government College in his home town, he went to Islamabad to do a masters in English Language and Literature (2004) at the International Islamic University, with cumulative grade point average of 3.5/4.0. After his graduation, he served in Bahria College Naval Headquarter Islamabad as a lecturer in English for 17 months. During this time he won a fellowship from the Higher Education Commission of Pakistan to pursue his PhD in English Literature in The Netherlands. He got admitted at Leiden University where Prof. Richard Todd supervised his course work from 2006 till the end of 2008. After Mr. Todd's illness and unexpected retirement, Professor Frans-Willem Korsten supervised Aziz's research project from 2009 to 2014.

Aziz has been writing English poems since 2004 and he had his first book, Poetic Palpitations from Pakistan: A Lyrical Document of Protest Against a Society, published on 9 September, 2014 by United P.C, Austria. He is a regular blog writer for the Huffington Post UK and a contributor to EMAJ magazine of the Euro Mediterranean Academy for Young Journalists. He also writes for International Policy Digest, Daily Times, The Sydney Globalist, The London Globalist and The Postcolonialist. He has written prose features that appeared in various international magazines, newspapers and electronic journals. He also served as an assistant fiction editor for the UK based literary magazine The Missing Slate. He has been working as a freelance translator for the last 4 years as well. After his PhD, he is supposed to serve as an Assistant Professor in English Literature at the department of Humanities in the COMSATS (Commission on Science and Technology for Sustainable Development in the South) Institute of Information Technology Lahore Pakistan.
