Acknowledgements

Finally a long journey is about to end and fitting all the lovely people who have helped me in this process in a concise acknowledgement has proven to be one of the most challenging tasks.

I need to thank my supervisors Prof. Touraj Atabaki and Prof. Marcel van der Linden. From the very first contact, Touraj warmly welcomed me to our project. He has been a supportive and critical supervisor, an attentive friend and at times a caring family member. Marcel was always there when I needed him. His forthright comments helped me sharpen my arguments and his encouragement pushed me to be more assertive. I am thankful to my “oily colleagues” Peyman Jafari and Kaveh Ehsani for our valuable exchanges. Peyman’s support went beyond working hours since my early days in Amsterdam.

I would like to express my gratitude to Prof. Karin Hofmeester, Prof. Leo Lucassen, and Prof. Mehrdad Vahabi, who kindly accepted to be in my dissertation committee.

Most of my theoretical basis was formed in Boğaziçi University. Despite the many years since I left the Atatürk Institute for Modern Turkish History, I still feel indebted and appreciate the discussions and supervision I benefited from there.

The foundational years of this study were spent at the International Institute of Social History, IISH with the funding of The Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research, NWO. I am grateful to my colleagues at the research and collection departments, and to the administrative staff. Jacqueline Rutte, Angèle Janse, Jacques van Gerwen, Marina de Regt, Rossana Barragán, Astrid Werburg, Maria Ullivarri, Gabriela Scodeller, and Suzanne Ossewaarde were particularly thoughtful and caring. I feel very fortunate to have met them.

The bibliography lists the archives and libraries I consulted. This study would not be possible without their helpful staff. Robabeh Motaghedi, Paul Schroeder, Nasser Khaksar, the Dashtegoli and the Rasooli family not only shared their memories and private archives, they also opened their networks and houses to me.

I am thankful to the Fox International Scholarship, which provided me with the opportunity to study at Yale University, MacMillan Center in 2010. I would like to thank Joe and Alison Fox as well as the coordinator of the programme, Julia Muravnik for this unique experience. I was granted

The Weatherhead Initiative on Global History Fellowship at Harvard University in 2013. I am particularly thankful to the coordinators of the programme, Sven Beckert and Charles Maier, and program administrator Jessica Barnard. Life in Cambridge would not have been as enriching as it was were it not for my office mates Norberto Ferreras and Julia McClure.

My path crossed with many precious people from all around the world during my PhD years. I am grateful to these many lovely coincidences that cherished my life. In no particular order, I would like to thank friends from the Gezi Solidarity movement in the Netherlands who have become parts of my chosen family since 2013; fellow radical historians Pepijn Brandon, Klaas Stuutje, and Rosa Deen; Rudi Batzell, Joane Chaker, and Liat Spiro of the Study of Capitalism group in Harvard; Joao Romao, Bahar Sakızlıoğlu, Mark A. Dixon, Merijn Oudenampsen, Michael Marchman, Yannis Tzaninis, Alex Merlo, Nina Brenjo, Christian De Vito, Johanna Wolf, Elif Keskiner, Aşiyân Aydın, Ard Dermout Cramer, Jack Ferguson, Federico Lafaire, and Seçkin İltan.

I am thankful to have Alex de Jong in my life. I would not have been able to finish this dissertation had he not tolerated my absences at the office and been a great companion whenever I needed. I am grateful to him. IIRE gave me the energy I needed in the last three years. I would like to thank Joost Kircz, Aat van Wijk, Arend van de Poel, Bertil Videt, and Branislav Gajanovic for their friendship and support. IIRE would not be IIRE without the activists, who came from all around the world to attend our schools and seminars. I am thankful to all of them for making my life more meaningful and joyful. This was all possible with the comradeship of many other people, in particular Penny Duggan and Marijke Colle.

I am thankful to all my family who, from long distance showed their love and support. My mother Afsaneh Djalaei has been particularly helpful whenever I needed assistance while dealing with Iranian archives. I am thankful to her.

Despite many heartbreaking news reports we followed everyday, Nathan Legrand and Safiye reminded me that life is a happy experience to share. I am lucky to have them in my life.
