

Universiteit
Leiden
The Netherlands

Hittite nasal presents

Shatskov, A.

Citation

Shatskov, A. (2017, October 25). Hittite nasal presents. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/58877>

Version: Not Applicable (or Unknown)

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/58877>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

Cover Page

Universiteit Leiden

The following handle holds various files of this Leiden University dissertation:
<http://hdl.handle.net/1887/58877>

Author: Shatskov, A
Title: Hittite nasal presents
Issue Date: 2017-10-25

Curriculum Vitae

Andrey Shatskov was born on 31 October, 1979, in Leningrad, USSR (now St. Petersburg, Russia). At school he studied classical languages and became interested in linguistics, so entering the General Linguistics Department of the St. Petersburg State University was a logical choice. While a student, he developed an interest in Comparative Indo-European Linguistics and especially in Hittite historical grammar. He did several courses on Akkadian at the Uppsala University (2001) and on Hittite and other Anatolian languages, as well as Sumerian, at the University of Chicago (2003), and finally graduated from St. Petersburg State University in 2004. The same year he was awarded a Huygens scholarship and completed a one year master's program in Comparative Indo-European Linguistics at the Leiden University. In the same year he became a PHD student at the Institute for Linguistic Studies in St. Petersburg. The promotion took place in November 2007. At present he is a research fellow at the Institute for Linguistic Studies and a part-time lecturer at the St. Petersburg State University.