Acknowledgments

The germination, unfolding, and completion of this dissertation were made possible thanks to the help of several people to whom I would like to express my celestial gratitude. First and foremost, my supervisors Ernst van Alphen and Helen Westgeest: without their diligent guidance and theoretical rectifications, this manuscript would not have been finished; it is thanks to all the copious educational supports they have given me that this dissertation has found its place.

I am profoundly indebted to László Munteán, not only for giving me the confidence to pursue my academic goals, but also for reassuring me about the yet-to-be-knowns; for the said and for the unsaid. In the same vain, I would like to thank Mette Gieskes for being an assiduous teacher from whom I learned a great deal, and for being a human who intrinsically emanates hope, sincerely and incessantly. Quite indispensable has been the meticulous revisions Jamie and Giles have made to the finalized text; they have not only proof-read this manuscript, but proved that friendship has a place outside time and space. Max and Saane, my dearest and oldest friends in the Netherlands, too, helped me out with translating the summary of the dissertation into Dutch. In a way that resists theorization, I am grateful to Marie, who repeatedly pulled me out of the abyss when I was frustrated during the writing process: her emotional place in this dissertation cannot be displaced.

Last but not least, I would like to say a million thanks to my parents, not only for giving me abundant love and support, but also for embracing my anachronistic and idiosyncratic lifestyle: for accepting me as a vagabond soul who cannot permanently inhabit somewhere, and precisely by doing this, for making me feel in situ in the world.
