

Universiteit
Leiden
The Netherlands

Neo-rentier theory: The case of Saudi Arabia (1950-2000)

Qasem, I.Y.

Citation

Qasem, I. Y. (2010, February 16). Neo-rentier theory: The case of Saudi Arabia (1950-2000). Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/14746>

Version: Not Applicable (or Unknown)

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/14746>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

CURRICULUM VITAE

Islam Yasin Qasem was born in 1973 in Syria. In 1989 Islam finished high school from Franklin High School in Reisterstown in the state of Maryland, USA. After high school Islam studied engineering at California State University in Fresno, receiving a Bachelor of Science in Computer Engineering. He spent five years working as a software engineer in Silicon Valley in Northern California. Afterward he earned a Diploma in General Management from the Executive Program at Harvard Business School in Boston. He continued his education at Columbia University in New York and obtained a degree of Master of International Affairs. In 2006 Islam received a Diploma De Estudios Avanzados in Political and Social Sciences (M.Phil.) from Universitat Pompeu Fabra in Barcelona, Spain. In addition, Islam received academic training at various European and American universities, including Central European University (Budapest), George Washington (USA), and the University of Maryland (USA). His teachings include guest lectures on domestic and foreign politics of Saudi Arabia, international politics of oil, and conflicts in the Middle East as well as courses on qualitative research methods, social theory, and the Middle East.