This thesis would not have been possible without the inspiration, support and guidance of my Ph.D. supervisors Edwin Bakker of Leiden University and Bert Molewijk and Patrick Overeem of respectively Amsterdam UMC and the VU University Amsterdam.¹ I am impressed by their dedication and want to thank them for all their efforts throughout the years.

Researching the ethics of counterterrorism among professionals has been facilitated by the Dutch National Coordinator for Counterterrorism and Security (NCTV). I am grateful for the trust placed in me to conduct this research. It was also an important step set by the former National Coordinator for Counterterrorism and Security to transcend the categorical secrecy of counterterrorism within the national and international counterterrorism community for the sake of academic research into ethics support in counterterrorism.

I want to thank the Inspectorate of Justice and Security to put me in the position to finish my Ph.D. research.

I want to thank the members of my team at the Inspectorate and my former colleagues at the NCTV for their support, patience and genuine interest in my ups and downs.

Furthermore, I want to thank all the unnamed participants of the moral case deliberations and many other inspiring anonymous counterterrorism professionals in the Netherlands and other parts of the world.

Last but not least, I would like to thank Marije, Caspar and Carmen for their humor, patience and love.
