Acknowledgement

It is well known that doing a PhD can be a solitary journey, but I consider mine to have been a truly collective project. If I were a small seed, the VVI and KITLV have been the fertile soil, and the people at these institutes have been the water and sunshine that let the seed grow.

Adriaan, I started this PhD thanks to you, and because of you. You inspired me to be in academia, encouraged me, guided me, and supported me through it. Gerry, discussions with you have always stimulated me. Thank you for your willingness to understand me and my thoughts, and for having trust in me.

And fellow PhDs and colleagues, while I do not have enough space here to express individual gratitude, I am no less grateful to you all: Santy, Bernardo, Fachrizal, Feby, Yance, Willem v.d. Muur, Annelien, Bruno, Arsjad, Maryla, Roxane, Hannah, Neske, Fayola, Laure, Laura, Erik, Monika, Katja, Lennie, Stacy, Sanne, Christian, Sarthak, Fenna, Matthew, Grace, Taufiq, Roel, Ward, James, Alana, Fridus, Marieke, Tom B., Tom H., Willem v.d. Molen, Kathy, Wouter, Bart, David, Henk, Gert, Rosemarijn, Katrien, Stephanie, Ton, Jan Michiel, Nadia, Carolien, Daniëlle, Daniël, Jacqueline, Nick, Suliman, Nienke, Mareike, Erik, Janine, Maartje, Yayah, Jeanette, Sikko, Ellen, Kari, Kora, Dennis, Pauline, Dyah, Stijn, Sulis, Pinky, Edward, Nicolas, Shiela, Fujimoto sensei, Yoshida sensei ... You and the shared stimulating discussions are the reason why I am in academia.

And Mies, you have a special place in my work and in my heart. We shared so many meals, trips, conversations, satisfaction, and excitement as much as frustrations and tears (tears were mostly mine!). I am forever grateful to you for being the most stimulating colleague, and the warmest friend, providing me a roof and a chocolate when it's tough.

I was also blessed with people during my fieldwork in Bali. Yogi and Dwi, you were more than research assistants to me, but colleagues, and friends. I pay enormous respect to Anggreni, a woman with a big and tender heart. Another amazing woman I met in Bali was Viebeke, who inspired me with her thoughts and actions. Sita, I would not have dared even to start my fieldwork without your presence. And although I cannot thank them by name, I am most grateful to my informants for confiding in me to share their intimate life stories.

The reason why I can go on an untraveled path is because I have 'the home', my family in Japan, where I can always return to. My mother has especially been the unchanging support. Thank you for giving me life, and showing the kind of mother that I could be myself and that I want to be for Michi.

I had another family that I came to be connected through our loving and loved girl. Papou and Mamou, the fact that I could always rely on you, has been a source of my faith in continuing in this PhD project. Alex, without your encouragement I probably would not have dared to apply for this position. Thank you for co-parenting, and I am grateful for the trust you all gave for my motherhood.

My dearest Michi. It is her, staying with her, talking with her, caring for her, and thinking for her, through which I have come to my understanding of what it is to be a child. You were two years old when I came with you to the Netherlands to start my PhD, and only three when I decided to go with you to Bali for fieldwork. Thank you for trusting me and thank you for existing. With you, and for you, I can do anything.
