

Universiteit
Leiden
The Netherlands

Trust in the Catholic Reformation. Genoa, 1594-1664

Peeters, T.D.H.M.

Citation

Peeters, T. D. H. M. (2020, March 31). Trust in the Catholic Reformation. Genoa, 1594-1664. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/97601>

Version: Publisher's Version

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/97601>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

Cover Page

Universiteit Leiden

The handle <http://hdl.handle.net/1887/97601> holds various files of this Leiden University dissertation.

Author: Peeters, T.D.H.M.

Title: Trust in the Catholic Reformation. Genoa, 1594-1664

Issue Date: 2020-03-31

Trust in the Catholic Reformation.
Genoa, 1594-1664

Proefschrift
ter verkrijging van de graad van Doctor aan de Universiteit Leiden, op gezag van Rector Magnificus prof.mr. C.J.J.M. Stolker, volgens besluit van het College voor Promoties te verdedigen op dinsdag 31 maart 2020
klokke 15.00 uur.

door

Theresia Dorothea Hendrina Maria Peeters
geboren te 's-Hertogenbosch in 1990.

Promotor: Prof. dr. J. S. Pollmann

Co-promotor: Dr. F. Roşu

Prof. dr. M. P. A. de Baar

Prof. dr. S. Ditchfield (University of York)

Prof. dr. J. F. J. Duindam

Prof. dr. W. François (Katholieke Universiteit Leuven)

Dr. M. van Gelder (Universiteit van Amsterdam)

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements.....	5
Introduction.....	7
1. Setting the scene. The Republic of Genoa in the seventeenth century.....	47
La Serenissima .....	47
Stefano Durazzo.....	54
Genoa's religious landscape.....	60
The lay perspective.....	68
Conclusion .....	74
2. Trust management. Three post-Tridentine reform initiatives .....	77
Reforming the secular clergy .....	79
The Lazarists' missionary efforts .....	93
The Jesuits and their Genoese allies .....	104
Conclusion .....	115
3. Beyond appearance? Trusting and distrusting the secular clergy .....	117
Appearance and trust.....	128
Problems of trust.....	138
Essence and appearance.....	152
Conclusion .....	157
4. When distrust thrives. The Magistrato delle Monache and the female convents .....	159
Views on the convent.....	166
An approach of distrust.....	173
Agency and trust.....	196
Conclusion .....	205
5. To overcome distrust. Three religious initiatives by Genoese women .....	209
The Turchine .....	217
The Medee .....	229
The Brignoline.....	239
Savona's Medee and the importance of freedom .....	255
Conclusion .....	260

6. Whom to trust? The establishment of the Lazarists in Genoa.....	263
How to win trust? .....	268
Whom to trust?.....	284
Conclusion .....	289
7. Between trust and obedience. Jesuit indipetae from Genoa and Corsica.....	293
Trust ‘from below’ .....	301
Trust ‘from above’: “I hope to obtain from V.P. the patent for heaven” .....	315
Conclusion .....	328
Conclusion .....	333
Abbreviations .....	347
Primary sources .....	349
Secondary sources .....	355
Samenvatting in het Nederlands .....	381
Curriculum Vitae .....	389

Acknowledgements

Now that my research project on trust is drawing to an end, I have the clear sense that trust was also what has made it possible from its inception. I am very grateful to my supervisor Judith Pollmann, and co-supervisor Felicia Roşu, who not only encouraged me to start this project but also continuously gave me the confidence that my perspective and research attempts were valid and worthwhile. Their trust and the freedom they gave me to make my own choices have enabled me to grow academically and on a personal level. Judith's provoking questions and suggestions never failed to challenge me (including, at times, challenging my laziness), while Felicia's precision, analytical skills, and constant support have greatly helped me ever since we started collaborating in 2012.

The Royal Netherlands Institute in Rome (KNIR) hosted me during my research stays in Rome. I thank its staff members, in particular Arnold Witte, for all their help, and the fellow residents for their feedback on the parts of my research that I presented at the Institute. I also want to express my appreciation for the input of my fellow cultural historians of the Huizinga Institute whose gatherings I was always happy to attend. The meetings with fellow PhD candidates Carolina Lenarduzzi, Cees Reyner, Erica Boersma, Silvia Gaiga, Carolien Boender and David de Boer never failed to provide stimulating conversations. I thank them for reading the different chapters of this dissertation and for their helpful comments. An extended version of the sixth chapter was published in the Vincentian Heritage Journal. I am grateful to its editor, Nathaniel Michaud, for his feedback on the text and for allowing me to use it in this thesis.

When I was still in the dark about the topic I was about to study and rather impressed by all the paradoxes of modern Genoa, the conversations with don Claudio Paolucci, don Paolo Fontana, don Luigi Nuovo, and Flavia Gattiglia were of much help. I thank them for their research suggestions, their willingness to introduce me to different Genoese archives and libraries, and for generously providing me with their individual work on different aspects of the Genoese Church in the early modern period. Of course, this research would not have been possible without the assistance of the staff of the different archives that I visited in Milan, Genoa and Rome. I am grateful also to Danilo Zardin for reading the entire manuscript and providing insightful comments, and to Emanuele Colombo for introducing me to the fascinating world of the indipetae, for the conversations we had in Rome and in Chicago, and for his guidance.

Special thanks go to Aurelio and Bianca Ratti, and to Mauro, Marina, and Simone Frega. The generosity of these two families who hosted me during my periods of research in Genoa has been incredible. They have truly made me feel at home. Travelling back after long days of archival research along the gorgeous coastline of Liguria and finding their company and delicious Italian meals is one of the fondest memories of these past years.

What is an adventure without companions? I have been lucky to be able to share the adventure of the past years and many of its crucial moments with Lauren Lauret, who started her research on the exact same day as I did. Thanks go to her, and to Beatriz Santiago Belmonte and Leonor Álvarez Francés, our fellow officemates, for their company over the years, and for the many lunches, dinners, and coffee breaks that have made the process of writing a dissertation so much more enjoyable. Sharing a hofje with Isabel has challenged me to not live life in a superficial way. I thank her for having been part of my road and letting me be part of hers.

Finally, I want to express my gratitude towards my parents, my brothers and sisters, and my many nieces and nephews. As much as they are proud of me completing a doctoral dissertation, I have been proud of being part of this family, and grateful for each of them individually. The experience of these years would have been very different had it not been for Giuseppe who has been unfailingly supportive as well as a great help to see my small setbacks and successes in the perspective of a lifelong road. While working on this thesis I have been travelling continuously between Leiden, Den Bosch, Tilburg, Milan, Genoa and Rome. I am grateful to the many friends – far too many to list here – whose company I have found in these different places and who, while I focused on the ‘detail’ of my dissertation, with their friendship continually placed before me the liberating truth of Eugenio Montale’s lines: “Sotto l’azzurro fitto / del cielo qualche uccello se ne va; / né sosta mai: perché tutte le immagini portano scritto: / ‘più in là!’.”<sup>1</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> “Beneath the dense blue sky, seabirds flash by, never pausing, driven by images below: Farther, farther!”. Trans. William W. Arrowsmith.