Acknowledgment

This PhD has been my metaphorical intellectual ‘final frontier’ – a five-year mission to explore scholarly literature, to seek out new methods, new evidence. At times, to boldly go where no other junior researcher has gone before! As ever, such a mission would not have been possible without the many supportive people that I had the privilege to cross paths with while conducting this research.

Firstly, a deep sense of gratitude and appreciation goes to my promotor Prof. Ton Dietz and supervisor Prof. Chibuike Uche. Ton, as promotor and mentor, you have been an invaluable supporter and source of inspiration for many years. Without your determination, energy, and encouragement (and your endless patience for correcting my writing), I would never have dared to (or been able to) conduct this research. Chibuike, I am ever grateful for accepting me on your team for this project. Your dedication to historical consideration, critical thinking, and in-depth knowledge of African institutions have been very inspiring and you always challenged me to dig deeper and look further. Thank you both for your guidance!

I was privileged to be part of a research project funded by the INCLUDE Knowledge Platform. My deep gratitude goes again to Prof. Uche for the overall programme coordination, as well as to the daily coordinator of the Kenya part of the project, Dr Akinyinka Akinyoade, and our project partners in Kenya: Dr. Paul Kamau, Dr. Bethuel Kinuthia from the University of Nairobi, and Catherine Mukoko from the Kenyan Association of Manufacturers (KAM). Yinka, thank you for everything! Paul, thank you for your tireless support in the field and out – in Hacienda. Bethuel, thank you for giving me a place to stay while in Nairobi. Catherine, thank you for offering me a desk in your office and for your friendship. To all of you, thank you for making my stay in Nairobi a wonderful and unforgettable experience. I would also like to recognize my project colleagues working in Nigeria: Dr. Ekumankama, Dr. Amobi, Dr. Okoye, and also Mr Debiro. I learnt so much from all of you during our interactions.

This thesis would not have been possible without the active participation of managing directors of the researched companies, their staff, the community members, and numerous key stakeholders in the sectors. Thank you, in particular, to Phylip Leferink for giving me the benefit of the doubt and granting me access to the wind farm site despite sensitive timing. My appreciation goes to Willem and Marie-José Dolleman, as well as to Carlo van Wageningen for walking me through the long and complicated process of setting up the biggest wind farm in Africa. I am also grateful to Nick Taylor, Yurenimo Stakwell, Simon Lenorokushu (my research assistant), Charlie, Julian, James, and Robert for your insights and kind support on the ground in Laisamis. I am indebted to all those who agreed to talk to me and contributed to this research throughout Kenya. Your input was incredibly important and valuable – Asante sana!

To all my colleagues at the African Studies Centre Leiden, particularly Rijk van Dijk and Willem Elbers for numerous academic discussions, help with conceptualization, and your general encouragement; Karin Nijenhuis for the PhD trainings and coaching; the entire ‘PhD cave’ for both mental and academic support but primarily for our coffee (and not only) breaks and lots of fun during long hours of writing. To the amazing library and support staff at the ASCL who are largely responsible for the unique warm character of the Centre, especially to Ella, Elvire, Maaïke, Gitty, Anna, Trudi, and Marieke – the latter two in addition for their hospitality and for making their homes mine during my time in Leiden.

I would like to thank my husband for always pushing me one step further in my reflections, for your critical thinking, and for teaching me to be more patient. Most of all, I thank you for your patience, support, and love throughout this seemingly never-ending process, for visiting me in Kenya numerous times, and for ensuring that I also took some breaks. Thank you to my parents-in-law for their kindness and interest. Lindii, Margo, P., and Marta – you were always there for me! Finally, and most importantly, I am incredibly grateful to my parents, grandparents, sister, and niece. You are all an incredible inspiration to me. Thank you for making me who I am, letting find me my own path, and for your unconditional support. Everywhere. Always. Kocham was bardzo bardzo mocno!

Lastly, there are so many people I met during this extraordinary voyage towards my PhD that I would like to thank here but I am constrained by the limited space. To those who are not listed above, I want to assure you that I remember each and every one of you and I have appreciated each conversation, each interaction, each shared ride that we had in the course of this project, and I will never forget your kindness.
