B♭Fgd, CGda, CGdad', CGdae: tuning of the strings

Inside the instrument the soundpost (between front and back, below the right foot of the bridge) and the bass bar are found.

All English translations are made by the author (ET), unless stated otherwise.

The captions (in the body text) for images from the research corpus were kept as short as possible. In principle the following was added: NN or ZN: name of artist, title of image and (production date). For more extensive information see Appendix 2.

In case an image was used which is not in the research corpus images, all the necessary information was added in a footnote.

Stephen Bonta (1927-2017) was an American musicologist. Bonta studied at Harvard University and received a PhD in 1964. As a scholar, Bonta's areas of expertise included the Italian composers Monteverdi and Legrenzi, and the origins of the modern-day cello. He has published several articles on the history of the violoncello.

Johann Sebastian Brandts Buijs (1905-1959), better known as Hans Brandts Buijs, was a Dutch conductor, harpsichordist, music author, composer and prominent expert on the work and life of Johann Sebastian Bach. Brandts Buijs published unknown Dutch early music, among which are compositions by Pieter Hellendaal.

Frans Albert van den Bremt (1919-??) was a Belgian musicologist. He wrote the first bibliography of the Dutch composer Willem de Fesch, based on research performed by the musicologist Stephan de Jonghe and extended by Van den Bremt.

Charles Burney (1726-1814) was an English musician, composer and music historian. He has written several books on music among which A general history of music (1776), The Present State of Music in France and Italy (1771) and The Present State of Music in Germany, the Netherlands, and the United Provinces (1773).

Egbert Buys (ca. 1725-1769) was 'Hofraad' of the King of Prussia. In the middle of the 18th century Buys lived in Amsterdam. He published several dictionairies on art, both in Dutch and in English.

Margaret Campbell (1917-2015) was a British music writer and editor, who published a biography of Arnold Dolmetsch, The great violinists and The great cellists.

Michel Corrette (1707-1795) was a French organist, teacher, composer-arranger and author of methods on performing practice. These methods were intended for many different instruments:

violin, cello, traverso, pardessus de viole, harpsichord, singing, guitar, mandolin, double bass, harp, viola, fiddle and recorder.

Elizabeth Cowling (1910-1997) was an American cellist and musicologist. Her dissertation Italian Sonata Literature of the Violoncello in the Baroque Era was expanded and published as The cello in 1975. The latter work is still considered standard reading for cellists.

Robert Crome published The Compleat Tutor for the Violoncello around 1765. Nothing is known about him.

Jean-Baptiste Cupis le jeune (1741-??) was a French cellist, composer and teacher. He studied the cello with Martin Berteaum and in 1772 he published his Méthode nouvelle et raisonée pour apprendre à jouer du violoncelle.

Gerhart Darmstadt is a German cellist, player of the arpeggione and conductor. Darmstadt is a teacher at the Hochschule für Musik und Theater in Hamburg. He has edited sonatas by several baroque composers, including sonatas composed by the Dutchman Jacob Klein.

Taco Dibbits is a Dutch art historian and since 2016, July 15 he is the director of the Rijksmuseum in Amsterdam. Dibbits has published dozens of articles on art-historical subjects.

Pieter Dirksen is a Dutch harpsichordist, organist and musicologist. He has specialised in the keyboard music of Sweelinck, the North German school and Johann Sebastian Bach. He has published several books on music. His 1996 dissertation on the keyboard music of Sweelinck was awarded the Dutch Praemium Erasmianum.

Henk O'Douwes is the author of the article De celocomposities van Willem de Fesch published in the Dutch music magazine Mens en melodie in 1959.

Jean Louis Duport (1749-1819) was a French cellist and composer. Duport studied cello with his older brother Jean-Pierre Duport (1741-1818). Around 1806 he published the famous standard work Essai sur le doigté du violoncelle et sur la conduite de l'archet.

François-Joseph Fétis (1784-1871) was a Belgian composer, music pedagogue, musicologist, violinist, harpsichordist, music critic and early music concert entrepreneur (in Brussels and Paris). Fétis was director of the Conservatoire in Brussels, and he is well-known for his Biographie Universelle des Musiciens et bibliographie générale de la musique (1881-1889).

Michael Feves is an American cellist. He was a cellist in the Dutch Radio Filharmonisch Orkest for 25 years. Together with Henk Lambooij he has done research for over 30 years, which has resulted in the publication of A Cellist's Companion.

Ian Finlay is the author of the article Musical Instruments in 17th-Century Dutch Paintings.

Luigi Forino (1868-1936) was an Italian cellist and music pedagogue. Forino published Boccherini sonatas, wrote a 5 part cello method and also a history of the violoncello: Il violoncello: il violoncellista ed i violoncellisti (1905).
