

Baghdadi Jewish networks in Hashemite Iraq : Jewish transnationalism in the age of nationalism $% \left(1\right) =\left(1\right) +\left(1\right) +\left($

Goldstein, S.R.

Citation

Goldstein, S. R. (2019, January 10). Baghdadi Jewish networks in Hashemite Iraq : Jewish transnationalism in the age of nationalism. Retrieved from https://hdl.handle.net/1887/68272

Version: Not Applicable (or Unknown)

License: License agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the

Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: https://hdl.handle.net/1887/68272

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

Cover Page

Universiteit Leiden

The handle http://hdl.handle.net/1887/68272 holds various files of this Leiden University dissertation.

Author: Goldstein, S.R.

Title: Baghdadi Jewish networks in Hashemite Iraq: Jewish transnationalism in the age of nationalism

Issue Date: 2019-01-10

Stellingen behorende bij het proefschrift van Sasha Rachel Goldstein-Sabbah

Propositions for the doctoral dissertation of Sasha Rachel Goldstein-Sabbah

- Iraqi-Jewish identity constructions in the Hashemite period can only be understood by integrating the influence of Baghdadi participation in transnational Jewish networks.
- 2. The Jewish community of Iraq used the periodicals of the Baghdadi satellite communities as a proxy media space for local communal issues.
- 3. Self-ascribed "Arab-Jewish" identity in Iraq was most present in middle class Jewish men.
- 4. Baghdadi Jewry self-identified with Sephardic Jewry prior to the creation of the state of Israel.
- Baghdadi Jewry's relationship with the Iraqi state in the Hashemite period, in many ways, parallels Western European Jewry actions after emancipation in the nineteenth century.
- 6. English and French were the dominant languages of transnational Jewish communication in the first half of the twentieth century.
- 7. The increased interaction of disparate Jewish communities in the twentieth century drove a globalization and secularization of Jewish identity among Middle Eastern and North African Jewry.
- 8. The academic study of modern Middle Eastern and North Africa Jewish communities is dominated by Zionist/anti-Zionist historiography.
- 9. The history of modern Jewish philanthropy and solidarity movements must be studied from a transregional perspective that integrates the experiences of diverse Jewish groups.
- 10. The legacy of Baghdadi trade networks in the Middle East today is demonstrated by the pervasiveness of 'amba in multiple Middle Eastern cuisines.