

Universiteit
Leiden
The Netherlands

Cities of refuge : slave flight and illegal freedom in the American urban South, 1800-1860

Müller, V.F.

Citation

Müller, V. F. (2020, January 16). Cities of refuge : slave flight and illegal freedom in the American urban South, 1800-1860. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/82707>

Version: Publisher's Version

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/82707>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

Cover Page

Universiteit Leiden

The handle <http://hdl.handle.net/1887/82707> holds various files of this Leiden University dissertation.

Author: Müller, V.F.

Title: Cities of refuge : slave flight and illegal freedom in the American urban South, 1800-1860

Issue Date: 2020-01-16

Cities of Refuge

Slave Flight and Illegal Freedom in the American Urban South, 1800-1860

Proefschrift

ter verkrijging van de graad van Doctor aan de Universiteit Leiden, op gezag van Rector Magnificus prof. mr. C.J.J.M. Stolker, volgens besluit van het College voor Promoties te verdedigen op donderdag 16 januari 2020
klokke 11.15 uur
door

Viola Franziska Müller geboren te Frankfurt am Main in 1987

Promotores:

prof. dr. Damian Alan Pargas

prof. dr. Marlou Schrover

Promotiecommissie:

prof. dr. Catia Antunes

dr. Seth Rockman (Brown University)

prof. dr. Ariadne Schmidt

prof. dr. Michael Zeuske (Universität zu Köln / Universität Bonn)

Table of Contents

List of Figures.....	iv
List of Tables.....	v
Abbreviations.....	vi
Acknowledgments.....	vii
Introduction
Freedom in the Midst of Slavery.....	1
Resistance and Slave Flight.....	3
Cities of Refuge.....	9
A Chaotic Choir.....	15
Chapter Synopsis.....	20
Chapter One
The Changing Landscape of Freedom.....	23
Manumissions: A Closing Door.....	24
The Second Slavery.....	28
Broken Families.....	32
Receiving Society.....	36
An Illegal Population.....	42
Conclusion.....	49
Chapter Two
A Mobile Elite: Profiling Southern Refugees.....	51
Gender and Mobility.....	52
The Hiring System as Springboard.....	60
Towards a City.....	68
Passing for Free.....	78
Conclusion.....	88
Chapter Three
Finding Refuge: Social and Spatial Integration.....	89
Urbanization.....	90
Spatial Segregation.....	98
Autonomy and Exclusion.....	105

Criminalization	112
Conclusion	117
Chapter Four
From Slavery to Poverty: Integration in the Urban Labor Markets	119
Best-Case Scenario	120
The Racial Coding of Labor	128
Regulatory Regimes.....	137
A Changing Demography	146
Accepted Exploitation.....	152
Conclusion	159
Chapter Five
Illegal but Tolerated: Urban Politics and Black Labor	161
A Slaveholders' World	162
Cities of Capitalists	170
Labor Control and Coerced Labor	178
The Power of Democracy	185
Conclusion	196
Conclusion
The Ambiguities of Illegal Freedom	197
Bibliography
Primary Sources	203
Secondary Literature	212
Sources of Figures.....	228
Summary in English	231
Samenvatting in het Nederlands	235
Zusammenfassung auf Deutsch	239
Curriculum Vitae	245

List of Figures

Figure 1: Map with Selected Cities.....	2
Figure 2: Runaway Slave Ads.....	10
Figure 3: Directions of the Domestic Slave Trade.....	34
Figure 4: Baltimore 1850.....	39
Figure 5: Mobile Occupations Broadened the Networks of Enslaved People.....	57
Figure 6: Black Oystermen in the Chesapeake.....	65
Figure 7: Frederick Douglass.....	66
Figure 8: Origins of Refugees in Richmond.....	69
Figure 9: Richmond around 1850.....	72
Figure 10: George Teamoh.....	83
Figure 11: Slave Pass, Charleston, 1843.....	84
Figure 12: Freedom Papers, Maryland, 1837.....	85
Figure 13: Map of New Orleans with Three Municipalities, 1845.....	95
Figure 14: First Municipality and Trémé with Patrolling Plan of Night Watch, 1840.....	96
Figure 15: Map of Baltimore, 1848.....	99
Figure 16: Charleston (Exemptions to the Prohibition to Erect Wooden Buildings).....	104
Figure 17: Dancing in Congo Square.....	106
Figure 18: Free African Americans in Richmond, 1865.....	110
Figure 19: Dock Work in New Orleans, 1853.....	131
Figure 20: Woman Carrying Bundle.....	134
Figure 21: Self-hired Bondswomen Selling Sweet Potatoes in Charleston.....	141
Figure 22: Slave Badge of a Servant, 1817.....	143
Figure 23: Slave Badge of a Mechanic, 1842.....	143
Figure 24: Slave Badge of a Fisher, 1814.....	143
Figure 25: Laborers at a Wharf in Virginia, 1863.....	154
Figure 26: Charleston 1855.....	163
Figure 27: Treadmill.....	164
Figure 28: Warehouse in Richmond.....	172
Figure 29: Runaways Committed to the State Depot.....	180

List of Tables

Table 1: Enslaved Population, 1790-1860	31
Table 2: Free People of African Descent, 1790-1860.....	37
Table 3: Free African American, Enslaved, and Total Urban Populations, 1800-1860	44
Table 4: Composition of the Free African American Population	49
Table 5: Population of Charleston Wards, 1824	102
Table 6: Urban Enslaved Populations, 1800-1860.....	138
Table 7: Black People Jailed in the Charleston Workhouse, 1856-1860.....	166
Table 8: Selected Arrests in Charleston, 1858-1860.....	192

Abbreviations

BCA	Baltimore City Archives, Baltimore, MD.
CCPL	Charleston County Public Library, Charleston, SC.
EKL	Earl K. Long Library, University of New Orleans, New Orleans, LA.
HML	Hill Memorial Library, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, LA.
JFK	Library of the John F. Kennedy Institute, Free University Berlin.
LaRC	Louisiana Research Collection, Tulane University, New Orleans, LA.
LOC	Library of Congress, Washington, D.C.
LVA	Library of Virginia, Richmond, VA.
MHS	Maryland Historical Society, Baltimore, MD.
MSA	Maryland State Archives, Annapolis, MD.
NOPL	New Orleans Public Library, New Orleans, LA.
SCDAH	South Carolina Department of Archives and History, Columbia, SC.
SCHS	South Carolina Historical Society, Charleston, SC.
SCLC	South Caroliniana Library Columbia, SC.
VHS	Virginia Historical Society, Richmond, VA.
VSA	Virginia State Archives, Richmond, VA.

Acknowledgments

This dissertation is the result of four years of extensive archival research, academic training, reading, teaching, traveling, discoveries, hard work, personal growth, and—perhaps most importantly—sharing experiences with others. As this enumeration already suggests, writing it was by no means a one-woman show, and many people were explicitly and implicitly involved in its making. I would like to take this opportunity to thank them.

I want to extend my gratitude to my supervisor Damian Pargas. Damian is an open-hearted and very funny person with a keen capacity for creating meaning out of seemingly confusing pictures. Thank you for continuously supporting me! Your enthusiasm and positivity made work so much easier! Marlou Schrover, my second supervisor, played a very important role during the intensive writing process of the last year. Marlou has a talent tackling problems very efficiently, and her expertise in a field different from my own was a much-needed addition to broaden the study's horizon. Also, I was fortunate enough to be part of a team of people who experienced together many of the same stages of work and research for a great deal of the time. Thank you for a fun time, Oran Kennedy and Thomas Mareite!

Besides my supervisors and team, I am indebted to people who had no visible reason to support me, but did so nevertheless. Many thanks to Jeffrey Kerr-Ritchie, Seth Rockman, and Sven Beckert for reading earlier chapters of this dissertation. I am also grateful to all those people who shared sources with me or who pointed me towards them. Besides my teammates, these include Seth Rockman, Gregg Kimball, Edward Papenfuse, and several librarians who caringly engaged with me and helped me navigate the archives. Also in line for thanks are Ariadne Schmidt, Catia Antunes, Seth Rockman, and Michael Zeuske for serving as my doctoral committee members, Jan-Bart Gewald and Jessica Roitman for joining the defense committee, and David Drengk and my brother Henning for volunteering as my paranimfen. Thank you very much for your time and support!

On a similar note, I would like to thank people who read parts of my research that were published as articles elsewhere but nevertheless implicitly feature in this dissertation. Mariana Dantas, Nico Pizzolato, and Irene Fattacciu supported me in this way, as did the 2018/2019 fellows of the Center for the Study of Slavery and Justice at Brown. I am generally grateful to everybody who bothered to read and/or commend on my work in progress. I received valuable feedback from Aviva Ben-Ur, David Doddington, Jared Hardesty, Bram Hoonhout, James Oakes, Anna Derksen, and Catia Antunes. At Leiden, the Small Gathering of the Economic and Social History section provided me with various opportunities to benefit from my colleagues' knowledge and to test my ideas. Likewise very important was the feedback I received—especially in the earlier years—from colleagues affiliated with the N.W. Posthumus training school for Economic and Social History. These include Laura Nys, Laurence van Goethem, Thomas Verbruggen, Regina Grafe, Pepijn Brandon, and Ben Wubs. The altruistic commitment to somebody else's work is one of the reasons why this profession has such a strong social side to it and shows that history writing is a joint effort.

Furthermore, during my research trips, I was extraordinarily lucky to meet wonderful people who prevented long periods in unknown lands from turning into lonely and monotonous loops of days. Thank you for hanging out with me and showing me around, Thomas Ginn, Dominic Nell, Marco Delsante, Elizabeth Belcher, Kit Gillespie, Krystal Halverson, Grace Garcia Varano, Katherine Bertrand, Jana Blakes, Mark Martin, Sarah Shapiro, Simeon Simeonov, Mimi Cabell, Kai Franz, and my sister Saskia. Many others who were generous and made my time in the US a good experience include Ian Stirton, John Wheeler, Bridgette Sloan, Meg Ryan, Jake Gambino, Candelaria Martínez, and Jane and William Bertrand.

Almost last but not least, I am grateful to the friends I have made in Leiden over the years: Charly Hoppchen, Yuri Guerin, Alice Cardoso, David Drengk, Benni Haas, Richard Foster, Cristiana Strava, Teddy Balan, Leonor Álvarez Francés, Ricardo Lapeira, and Camilo Rios. Equally valued are those who, though at a distance, were always there for me. I am sorry that I cannot name them all! Although not explicitly involved in my research, they helped turn the years as a PhD researcher into a truly enriching experience. The one person who was always with me during the most difficult part of the PhD, which was the actual writing process, was David de Boer. It is hard to imagine having done all this without you, David! Finally, yet importantly, there are my parents, Doris and Hugo. Danke für alles, was ihr für mich getan habt und tut! Danke für euer Vertrauen und eure Liebe und dass ihr immer da seid!

Although I do not feel older now than four years ago when I started my PhD, I have grown in so many ways. I understand much more than before, for which I am grateful, and although I know more, I—predictably—am also more aware of what I do not know. This means that reading, teaching, traveling, and sharing have not yet ended, and I look forward to sharing new adventures with new colleagues and friends and hopefully also a large number of the old ones! Thanks for everything!

