Title: Old Russian birchbark letters: a pragmatic approach

Issue Date: 2016-09-28

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I thank my supervisors for the continuous support they have given me; for the hours they have spent in reading and commenting on earlier versions of this study; for the freedom they have given me to develop the research project in the direction of my interests. Our meetings always stimulated me to carry on. I am grateful to the Leiden University Centre for Linguistics for providing me with an environment in which I could conduct the research for this study. I also thank my colleagues in the department of Russian Studies for the pleasant working atmosphere.

CURRICULUM VITAE

Simeon Dekker (Dordrecht, 1988) finished his pre-university education at the Gomarus Scholengemeenschap (Gorinchem) in 2006. He went on to study English Language and Culture (BA) and Slavic Languages and Cultures (BA) at Leiden University. He received his MA degree in Slavic Languages and Cultures from the same university in 2011. In September 2011 he started working on a research project funded and facilitated by the Leiden University Centre for Linguistics, which has resulted in this dissertation. Between 2011 and 2016, he also lectured on Russian grammar and related subjects in the department of Russian Studies at Leiden University.
