DEDICATION

I dedicate this dissertation
to Serê,
whose beautiful smile encourages me
to believe in a world, in which
my mother tongue,
of mountains,
and rivers,
and trees,
is still spoken.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The story of this research begins in the corridors of the Communication Faculty of Ankara University, and in the exceptional cultural atmosphere of (relative) peace in Turkey, between the years of 2015 and 2017. I then had the right to be employed, to travel, and to challenge the borders recognized for Kurdish studies within the Turkish academy. I took pleasure, then, in pushing the boundaries of regnant understandings of Kurdish representations. I met with non-professional film workers, and interacted with a range of communities who had a political interest in Turkey's Kurdish issue. In this context, I would like, first and foremost, to thank the banality of evil that I have been subjected to since early 2017, which, having deprived me of the basic rights and freedoms I once enjoyed, has taught me the crucial role that democratic principles play in sustaining intellectual inquiry.

I cannot thank enough my advisors Prof. Eric Jan Zürcher and Prof. Joost Jongerden, whose research and intellectual stances have enlightened my own work. I would not have been able to finish this research without their support. It is a strange fact of history that, having been deprived of my passport, I have not had the chance to experience Leiden University's campus. Leiden has nonetheless provided an intellectual home, through which I have been able to enjoy a right to academic freedom, to feel a sense of intellectual solidarity, and to sustain a life of thinking and ethics. I owe much to the office manager of Leiden Institute of Area Studies, José Brittijn, who has been extremely kind and helpful to me throughout this unique process.

For all of their assistance, I thank Eğitim-Sen, the Education and Science Workers' Union, and Front-Line Defender, all of which provided financial support for both daily matters and for the legal proceedings I have been subjected to, as one of the many Academics for Peace in Turkey.

The long walks we had with Ahmet Gürata on the hidden paths of Bilkent University Campus led me to ask better questions about Kurdish cinema. My old office mates Ali Karadoğan and Umut Tümay Arslan have always been there for my research problems, and offered all they had in support of my research. Alper Göbel, Barış Ünlü, Cengiz Güneş, Elçin Aktoprak, Eren Barış, Kevin Smets, Valentina Vitali and the anonymous reviewers of my publications have contributed much towards addressing the gaps in my thinking. Madhuri Karak's presence in my life has been a true blessing, and her inspiring intellect has added a spark to every topic I'm interested in.

My broad, exilic Dersimî family has been impossibly supportive throughout the writing process. My grandma's jokes about my endless 'homework' were indeed the cutest problem I had. In addition to the Şimşek and Day families, I was lucky to have Harvey Berman's terrible sense of humor and Sarah Ringle's beautiful voice in the background. Bircan Yorulmaz, Dicle Kızıllan, Dicle Yıldırım, Ebru Akkal and Sevgi Zülfikar insisted on bringing laughter in the darkest moments. Sina James Day tirelessly showed me that what matters in life is to enjoy the games. Echo and Thunder have been the best cat friends I could think of, sleeping beside me across sleepless nights.

John William Day's presence in my life, and the pleasure we share in languages, arts and cooking, brightened my mind and soul. His love and care have been the spring of all good beginnings. The final steps of my research were enchanted by Sarah Day's kicks and hiccups. I am grateful to all these characters, who have helped me in more ways than I know.
