Acknowledgements

First and foremost, I wholeheartedly thank my supervisor Albert de Jong, because he was the one who suggested I do this research, and he gave me the opportunity to delve into an extremely interesting topic that took me on a journey to my favourite era, Late Antiquity. I thank him, because, knowing my academic background and interests, he rightly judged that this would be a subject that would fascinate me; because he trusted me, and with his encouragement, he made me overcome my insecurities. I also want to express my deep gratitude to my co-supervisor, Dimitris Kyrtatas, for his constant and substantial interest, for his prompt response, and the feedback he has consistently given me at all stages of this project. I am very grateful to both, for their academic and personal support. Both being prominent historians of Late Antiquity, with their valuable knowledge and critical insights, their guidance and useful comments, our inspirational discussions, helped to effectively complete this endeavour.

I would like also to express my gratitude to the following friends, fellow researchers, and academics: Prof. Rika Benveniste (University of Thessaly), for her fruitful feedback on parts of my work, and her encouraging words; Dr Mattias Brand (University of Zurich), for his useful comments on draft parts of this dissertation and for our fruitful discussions where we exchanged our views and research findings; Petros Parthenis (PhD, University of Thessaly), for his inspired and diligent translation of some ancient Greek texts that troubled me into modern Greek; Dr Mark Locicero, (University of British Columbia) for his excellency in English language editing and proofreading of my manuscript. For their interest in my research and for giving me access to their work (published and/or unpublished), I thank: Prof. Johannes van Oort (Radboud University and University of Pretoria), Prof. Majella Franzmann (University of Sydney), Dr Jean-Daniel Dubois (Ecole Pratique des Hautes études), and Afroditi Kamara (Historian-Cultural Heritage Consultant).

The academic and institutional surroundings definitely contributed greatly to the completion of this project. The meetings of the 'Late Antiquity discussion group' led by Prof. Kyrtatas and held in the History Lab (my workplace) of the University of Thessaly, and the symposia organized by the group, gave me much food for thought, and the opportunity to present my ideas and research and interact with other colleagues. The International Association of Manichaeic Studies (IAMS), through its conferences, and the Mani in Cambridge day-symposium made me feel a member of the 'wider family of Manichaeologists' and gave me the opportunity to meet and discuss with leading scholars on the topic from all over the world, to present parts of my work, to test my working hypotheses, and receive useful comments and feedback. I am also indebted to all my colleagues (academic and administrative staff) from the Department of History, Archaeology and Social Anthropology at the University of Thessaly, for their support, understanding, and trust that had a great significance for my work on this thesis all these years. I also thank all the members of the LIAS (Leiden Institute for Area Studies) secretariat, for the always, prompt and effective administrative support they offered me. In addition, I thank LIAS for partly funding the editing of this dissertation.

Special thanks go to my friends from the time of my MA studies, Dr Elizabeth den Boer (Leiden University) and Selma Tummers (PhD candidate, Leiden University), for their warm friendship, their interest, encouraging words, and hospitality during my trips to the Netherlands. I also thank my friends Dr Vasileios Karakasis and Dr Aris Politopoulos (both Leiden University) for their help and valuable advice and hospitality.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Finally, I am thankful to my family for their unconditional love and support all these years. My charismatic father, Vartholomeos, deserves special thanks for the hours he devoted to reading parts of the dissertation and for our challenging discussions during our walks that helped me clarify several issues. I also thank my mother Ioulia, my daughter Electra and her family for enduring my absence, understanding the significance that this study had for me. The greatest debt of all I owe to my life's partner and love, Pantelis. His help was multidimensional and cannot be captured in a few words. I thank him for the corrections of my English, his critical comments, his psychological support. But most of all I thank him for sharing my enthusiasm for the subject and for enjoying the endless conversations we had daily, even during our swims.

A Note on Translations and Referencing System

When English translations of ancient Greek texts are available, these are being used (see Bibliography). Where translations are modified, this is noted. Unless otherwise indicated, translations have been made by the author of this dissertation.

When a single translation, the most common, is used for an ancient text, then, in the footnotes, the translator's last name and the corresponding pages are indicated. When multiple translations of ancient texts are used, publication dates are also provided.

Most of the ancient texts in Greek were accessed via Thesaurus Linguae Graecae (TLG) (University of California, Irvine).

The abbreviations above and the referencing system in the text and in the bibliography follow The SBL Handbook of Style: For Biblical Studies and Related Disciplines (2nd ed.), by B.J. Collins, B. Buller, J.F. Kutsko, P.H. Alexander, J. Eisenbraun, J.D. Ernest et al. Atlanta: SBL Press, 2014.
