Curriculum Vitae

Bert van Pinxteren (Amsterdam, 1955) has an MA in adult education and community organization from the University of Amsterdam (1981) and a Research Master in African studies from Leiden University (2018). He was admitted as a Ph.D. researcher to the Graduate School of Humanities of Leiden University in August 2018. Bert has worked in a number of international NGOs, notably on environment and development issues. He started his career at the Holland Committee on Southern Africa, one of the largest anti-apartheid solidarity groups in the Netherlands, where he was responsible for recruiting Dutch teachers for work in newly-independent Zimbabwe. He spent four years in Kenya as fundraising expert for the Environment Liaison Centre International and its worldwide network of grassroots NGOs. He then worked, among others, as coordinator of Friends of the Earth International, where he was responsible for a growth in the number of organisations in the network and in funding. After spending a period working in the sector of Internet for research and education he ended his career as senior programme officer at ActionAid.
