

Universiteit
Leiden
The Netherlands

Migrant rights, voting, and resocialization: suffrage in Chile and Ecuador, 1925-2020

Finn, V.J.

Citation

Finn, V. J. (2021, September 16). Migrant rights, voting, and resocialization: suffrage in Chile and Ecuador, 1925-2020. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/3210897>

Version: Publisher's Version

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/3210897>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

Cover Page

Universiteit Leiden

The handle <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/3210897> holds various files of this Leiden University dissertation.

Author: Finn, V.J.

Title: Migrant rights, voting, and resocialization: suffrage in Chile and Ecuador, 1925-2020

Issue Date: 2021-09-16

Migrant Rights, Voting, and Resocialization:
Suffrage in Chile and Ecuador, 1925–2020

Victoria Finn

Migrant Rights, Voting, and Resocialization:
Suffrage in Chile and Ecuador, 1925–2020

Proefschrift

ter verkrijging van de graad van doctor aan de Universiteit Leiden, op gezag van rector magnificus prof.dr.ir. H. Bijl, volgens besluit van het college voor promoties te verdedigen op donderdag 16 september 2021
klokke 10:00 uur

door

Victoria Jean Finn
geboren te Pittsfield, MA (Verenigde Staten) in 1986

Promotor: Prof.dr. P. Silva

Co-promotor: Dr. F. Rosenblatt (Universidad Diego Portales, Chili)

Promotiecommissie: Mw. Prof.dr. M.L.J.C. Schrover
Prof.dr. D. Altman (Pontificia Universidad Católica de Chile)
Mw.Prof.dr. L. Pedroza (El Colegio de México / GIGA Hamburg)
Mw.Dr. H. Mazepus (Governance and Global Affairs)
Mw.Dr. M.G. Palacio Ludeña

Table of Contents

Index of Figures and Tables	viii
Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
Chapter 1	29
Migrant Voting: Types, Turnout, and Multi-Sited Political Learning
1.1 The Typology: Four Migrant Voting Types	30
1.1.1 Not just ‘here’ and ‘there’: To vote or abstain in two countries makes four options	32
1.1.2 Fitting dual transnational voting into transnationalism and citizenship	37
1.2 Migrant Voter Turnout: Language, Interest, Time, and Ties	42
1.2.1 Inherent duality: Multiterritorial ties and civic duty in two countries	48
1.3 Migrants’ Political Learning: Temporality, Agents, Places, and Spaces	52
1.4 Conclusion	58
Chapter 2	59
Granting then Exercising Migrant Voting Rights: Insights from Chile
2.1 Migrant Enfranchisement: How and Why States Set the Boundaries of the Demos	60
2.2 A Long Road to Enfranchising Immigrants and Emigrants in Chile	63
2.2.1 The 1925 Constitution: Immigrant voting rights in relative democracy	67
2.2.1.1 Explaining early enfranchisement	72
2.2.2 The 1980 Constitution: Expanding immigrant voting rights under authoritarian rule	77
2.2.2.1 A foreign resident’s right versus a national’s duty	78
2.2.3 Granting emigrant voting rights, 2014–2017	83
2.3 Surveying the Four Migrant Voting Types in Chile	85
2.3.1 An original electoral online survey	87
2.3.2 Measuring demographics, socioeconomic standing, and political engagement	88
2.3.3 A brief validation of Chile’s migrant population and turnout	92
2.4 Findings from Surveying Migrants in 2017	95
2.4.1 Answering four hypotheses on migrant voting	97
2.5 Conclusion	103

Chapter 3	108
Unpacking Migrants' Electoral Decisions: Insights from Ecuador
3.1 A Short Road to Enfranchising Immigrants and Emigrants in Ecuador	109
3.1.1 Granting migrant voting rights in the 1998 and 2008 Constitutions	110
3.2 Findings from Interviewing Migrants in 2019	112
3.2.1 Selection process and method limitations	115
3.3 Reasons Migrants Vote: Ties and Being Invested in a Flourishing Future	118
3.3.1 Multiterritorial ties to people and places	119
3.3.2 Investment in a country's flourishing future	121
3.3.3 Formal recognition as a voter	125
3.3.4 Bureaucratic reasons for migrant voting	126
3.4 Migrants' Enduring Authoritarian Imprints in Two Countries	127
3.4.1 Authoritarian imprints and typical trajectories	130
3.4.2 Democracy close at hand? Violence, corruption, and narco-politics	132
3.4.3 Voting 'here' in democracy and 'there' in nondemocratic elections	135
3.4.4 From no voting to democratic voting	137
3.5 Conclusion	139
Chapter 4	142
Migrant (Non-)Voting, Resocialization, and the Roots Routes
4.1 (Re)Socialization Processes and Multiterritorial Ties	144
4.1.1 Political socialization: Growing roots	144
4.1.2 Political resocialization: Growing new roots	147
4.2 The Roots Routes: Nine Paths to Explain Migrant Voting	150
4.2.1 Dual transnational voters: Trajectories through the migrant voting typology	157
4.2.2 Multiple political identities based on country-specific contexts	159
4.3 Migrant Political Insiders and Outsiders: Rights and (Non-)National Citizens	163
4.4 Reasons for Migrant Non-Voting: Abstention Versus Prevention	169
4.4.1 Abstention: Migrants who abstain can still be political insiders	170
4.4.2 Prevention: Rights on paper but not in practice	173
4.5 Conclusion	177

Conclusion	180
Legislation References	200
References	203
Appendix	233
Samenvatting	292
Curriculum Vitae	303

Index of Figures and Tables

Figures

1	A Migrant Voting Typology	10
1.1	Relations Between the Four Types of Migrant Voting	38
1.2	Select Necessary Conditions for Migrant Voting	46
1.3	Four Political Learning Places and Spaces for International Migrants	54
2.1	Chile's Immigrant Stock and Percentage within Total Population, Select Years 1875–2019	64
2.2	Prior Migrant Voting: 658 Survey Respondents in Chile	97
2.3	Odds Ratio Graphs from the Multinomial Logistic Regression, N=658	99
4.1	The Roots Routes: Nine Paths of Migrant Political (Re)Socialization	151
4.2	Prior Migrant Voting: 58 Interviewees in Ecuador	158
4.3	Intention for Future Migrant Voting: 56 Interviewees in Ecuador	158
4.4	Temporal Nonlinear Hurdles to Immigrants' Access to Formal Rights	165

Tables

1.1	Longitudinal Migrant Voting Processes	57
2.1	Milestones in Chile's 92-year Road to Enfranchising Immigrants and Emigrants	66
2.2	Two Paths for Immigrants to Vote, Chile	82
2.3	Chile's Foreign-Born Population, Select Years 2005–2019	93
2.4	Foreign-Born Population and Voters, 2017, Chile	95
3.1	Milestones in Ecuador's 11-year Road to Enfranchising Immigrants and Emigrants	110
3.2	Description of 71 Respondents by Origin Country, Select Variables	113
3.3	Reasons for Migrant Voting	118
3.4	Political Regimes and Leaders in Origin and Residence Countries, 1979–2020	128
4.1	Summary of the Nine Possible Roots Routes	152
4.2	Reasons for Migrant Abstention	170

Acknowledgements

Starting a PhD would have been impossible without my parents, who invested in my early education and development, sparked my creativity, taught me work ethic, and always let me pave my own path— Mom and Dad, I love you and thank you.

I extend my gratitude to my supervisor Prof. Patricio Silva, for his suggestions and interest in my research over these years. Thank you to my co-supervisor, Dr. Fernando Rosenblatt, from Universidad Diego Portales (UDP), for his reliability and capacity for always finding the balance between offering me help and autonomy. Many thanks to the UDP Political Science department, especially the doctoral program director, Dr. Cristóbal Rovira Kaltwasser, as well as Dr. Claudio Fuentes, Dr. Eva Hamamé, Dr. Carlos Meléndez, and Prof. Patricio Navia for their support and academic zeal. From the initial project to final thesis, I appreciate the thorough and insightful comments from Dr. Carolina Segovia.

For research grants, I am grateful to Centro de Estudios de Conflicto y Cohesión Social (COES), Núcleo Milenio de Desafíos a la Representación, the Dora Plus scholarship with the European Regional Development Fund, and UDP for the fully funded dual PhD program; and conference grants from the American Political Science Association, Migration Policy Centre at the EUI, Latin American Studies Association, and Institute for Humane Studies. Universidad Casa Grande supported my work in Ecuador and FONDECYT 1161262 and FONDECYT 1190072 in Chile.

For leading by example and for generous encouragement on my academic path, I remain indebted to Prof. Luicy Pedroza, Dr. Daniela Vintila, Prof. Diego Acosta, and Dr. Cristián Doña-Reveco. Many thanks to my talented editor, Cindy Zhang, and Jorge Vásquez for research assistance. For collaboration and inspiration, thank you to Dr. Mari-Liis Jakobson, Dr. Marcia Vera-Espinoza, and Dr. Leiza Brumat. I appreciate the support and opportunities received from Prof. Dr. Maarten Vink, Dr. Pau Palop-García, Dr. Beth Whitaker, Dr. Beth Wellman, Dr. Ron Hayduk, and Dr. Jay McCann. To those who nurtured my early academic path, a special thanks to Dr. Gina García Rodríguez, Prof. Dr. Amelie F. Constant, and Prof. Dr. Klaus F. Zimmermann.

Thank you to my peers qua friends: Seba Koch for unwavering backing during the first year and Lisa, Pame, and Germán for making our office a second home. I am forever grateful to my frequent co-author, editor, and reviewer, but most importantly, an unfaltering and dependable friend, Sebastián Umpierrez de Reguero. Many thanks also to Vivi, Sudha, Lisa Lungo, TPaul, and LD. For learning from the failures to celebrating the victories together, thank you to my leading protagonist, Pablo, for unconditional patience, love, and stability throughout the doctoral degrees.