CURRICULUM VITAE

Federico Dragoni was born on July 2, 1992 in Milan, Italy. From 2006 to 2011 he attended the Liceo Classico C. Beccaria in Milan, obtaining a High School Diploma in Classics in 2011. In parallel, he studied clarinet at the Conservatorio G. Verdi in Milan, where in 2009 he obtained a Music BA at the early age of 17. In order to pursue his early interests in Iranian languages, he moved to Rome in 2011, where he was admitted to Sapienza University of Rome to study Modern Persian and Iranian philology under the guidance of Mauro Maggi and Paola Orsatti. In 2014, he obtained a BA degree (with honours) in Oriental Languages and Cultures from the same institution with an edition and commentary of the Late Khotanese Aśokāvadāna. Having developed a special interest in Middle Iranian, he moved in 2014 to Berlin, where he was admitted to the MA Iranistik at the Freie Universität Berlin and studied Middle Iranian with Desmond Durkin-Meisterernst and Avestan and Pahlavi with Alberto Cantera and Götz König. He obtained an MA degree in Iranistik (with honours) from the same institution in 2016, with a thesis on the Pāzand passages in the manuscript tradition of the Bundahišn. During his MA, he was employed as a student assistant in different research projects at the Institut für Iranistik, first under the guidance of Maria Macuch (2015-2016) and then of Alberto Cantera (2016-2017). Since 2017 he has been employed as a PhD staff member at Leiden University (LUCL) as part of the NWO-funded project ‘Tracking the Tocharians from Europe to China’, under the guidance of Michaël Peyrot. During his stay in Leiden, he has published five articles in peer-reviewed journals and books, presented his findings in several international conferences and workshops (Moscow, Jena, Turin, Heidelberg, Berlin, Leiden) and taught a BA and MA course in Khotanese at Leiden University.
