Acknowledgements

Writing a dissertation is never the work of a single person. It is always the fruit of collaboration between the author and her/his network. My biggest thanks to Prof. Gerard Persoon and Dr. Tessa Minter from the Institute of Cultural Anthropology and Development Sociology, Leiden University, for their guidance, support, and confidence in me. My dissertation would never have been completed without them sharing their theoretical and practical knowledge with me. Thanks also to Renske Kok, Louise van Gent, and Ilse Prins for their supports in administrative matters.

I wish to express my deepest gratitude to the Orang Rimba for allowing me to conduct fieldwork among them and for their active participation in collecting relevant information. In no particular order, I would like to thank late Tumenggung Maritua, Tumenggung Tarib, Tumenggung Ngrip, Menti Ngelembo, the late Midah Penado, Wakil Menyurau, Nyerah, Nyelang, Depati Pengalam, Mangku Besemen, Prabung, Bepak Pengusai, Bedingin, Budi, Spintak, and the Orang Rimba groups in Terab, Sako Tulang, Kedundung Muda, and Penglaworon.

In the Netherlands, I am very grateful for the good company of Jan van der Ploeg, Darmanto, and Mayo Buenafe-Ze during my Ph.D. journey. I would like to thank other colleagues in Leiden who witnessed my growth, personally and academically. Mbak Anti, Pak Edgar, Billy, and Joyce always opened their home for me anytime. I won't forget Julinta and her family who allowed me to stay in their home for three months. I thank Henry Wijaya, Ricardo Simarmata, Nuril, Mbak Nuning, Mbak Cici, Julia, Ratih, Bagus, Jajang, Vando, Fajri, Gia, Yulisan, Ingrid, Mas Hari, Mbak Mega, Mas Tjah, Prima, Wildan, Zam Zam, Nazar, and other colleagues. I enjoyed our times together in Leiden, biking, shopping, and having endless discussions over Indonesian food.

Back home in Indonesia, I extend my gratitude to WARSI colleagues who provided assistance for my fieldwork. They provided me with shelter, food, various publications, maps, data, information, tireless discussion days and nights, and other practical support for fieldwork. I would like to thank Mas Robert Aritonang, Mas Abdi, Mas Ujang, Mas Kristiawan, Mas Aska, Mas Nopirin, Karin, Tyas, Sasha, Ida, Chrissy, Mas Erinaldi, late Mas Andi, Mas Rakhmat Hidayat, Mas Rudi, Mas Zainuddin, Huzer, and many other colleagues.

I was also lucky to have the opportunity to discuss some Orang Rimba-related matters with the ones who are working closely with the Orang Rimba. For this, I thank Oyvind Sandbukt and Mas Tijok who crossed my path in the early stages of fieldwork in Jambi, and other places around the world in later stages. In addition, I am deeply indebted to the family of Pak Pur and Pak Parian. Their kindness and help will be forever remembered.

In my small circle in Jogja, I am so grateful for the tireless support of my dear friends and family. Prof. Laksono introduced me to anthropology and gave me the opportunity to conduct fieldwork among the Orang Rimba. My thanks also to the late Prof. Sumiyati, Prof. Hardi, Mbak Widuri, Mas Nico, Halim, Gunawan, Mbak Lande, and other colleagues from the Centre for Asia Pacific Studies of Universitas Gadjah Mada, of which I was part for more than 10 years. I am also thankful for the never-ending help of Jubair, Mbak Sri, and Bayu who provided me with their tremendous support, academically, morally, and personally.

I am grateful for the grant from the Louwes Fund for Research on Water and Food, without which this dissertation would not exist.

I would like to also thank my current office at the ASEAN Centre for Biodiversity, the Philippines, which gave me the flexibility to finalize my dissertation before my public defense. For this, I would like to thank Dr. Theresa Mundita S. Lim (the Executive Director), Ms. Clarissa Arida (PDI Director), and Corazon A. De Jesus JR (the SGP Coordinator).

Last but not least, I will be forever thankful for the endless support and unconditional love of my family: my beloved husband (Obiet Wicaksono), my mother, my late father, and my siblings (Nanang, Nana, Ika, and Nova). They might have never fully understood or perhaps even read any of my work, but they always believed in me just the same. They went through everything together with me during the whole journey. They are the reason for what and who I am today.
