

Universiteit
Leiden
The Netherlands

Atlantic advices: the Atlantic world in the Dutch periodical press, ca 1635-1795

Baakman, E.J.

Citation

Baakman, E. J. (2023, January 31). Atlantic advices: the Atlantic world in the Dutch periodical press, ca 1635-1795. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/3513897>

Version: Publisher's Version

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/3513897>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

CURRICULUM VITAE

Esther Baakman (Zwolle, 1986) studied History, with a minor in Conflict Studies, and Dutch Law at Utrecht University. In 2012 she obtained her MA-degree in Criminal Law, followed the next year by a RMA-degree in History. As part of her RMA Citizens, States, and Citizenship she spent a summer semester at Freiburg University in Germany. After completing her studies in 2013 she worked as a junior lecturer in Criminal Law at the Willem Pompe Instituut in Utrecht. In February 2015 Esther started her doctoral research, as part of the NWO-funded Vidi-project Covering the Ocean under supervision of prof. dr. Michiel van Groenou and prof. dr. Geert Janssen, initially at the University of Amsterdam and later at Leiden University. Alongside her research, she taught several courses and obtained her academic teaching qualification (BKO) in 2019. Currently, Esther is working as a lecturer in Political History at the Radboud University in Nijmegen.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The writing of this dissertation was in many ways a collaborative effort and it would not have seen the light of day without incurring debts of gratitude along the way.

I am grateful to Michiel van Groesen and Geert Janssen for their guidance over the past years. I have been lucky with two supervisors who consistently encouraged and challenged me, and remained patient with me throughout. Your candid comments, helpful suggestions, and gentle nudges in the right direction have been of great value in finding my footing as a historian.

My thanks also go out to Tiffany Bousard, my ‘partner in crime’ in this project, with whom I shared the ups and downs of PhD-life. In our tiny office, first in Amsterdam and later in Leiden, we not only discussed our respective projects, but also everything else under the sun. I am grateful for your diligent reading of draft after draft, for our brainstorming sessions that have given this book its title, and most of all for your companionship along the way – even after you returned to Belgium.

Discussing my work in the ‘news club’ and the PhD-pizzaberaad in Amsterdam, and in the ‘Atlantic club’ in Leiden sharpened my thinking and offered valuable new insights, as did the collaboration Arthur Weststeijn and Johannes Müller, postdoc fellow-travellers in the Vidi-project. Thanks to my colleagues at Vaderlandse Geschiedenis in Leiden and, more recently, Politieke Geschiedenis in Nijmegen, who regularly pulled me into lunches, cups of tea, and department schoolreisjes, I did not get lost in the maze of early modern newspapers.

The world is of course wider than scholarly achievements alone. The many evenings spent playing Catan, or other board games, with Maaïke and Miriam, and the many cups of tea (or hot chocolate) and conversation with friends have kept up my spirits along the way. Last but not least, I am grateful to have the unwavering love and support of my parents, sisters, and brother as well as the welcome distraction of my lovely niece and nephews.