Composition of search results

Documents and positions as retrieved from Leiden Law School data set.

For the hierarchy level of the court, the newness of the document, and the authority of the source a three-point scale is used. For all other factors the presence or absence of the factor in the result is shown.

A.1 Example query 1

Query: ‘Tarieven deskundigenonderzoek’ Translated: ‘Fees expert witnesses’

Total number of results: 4945

Question 1:

Option 1: Recency (1), Legal hierarchy (3)

Option 2: Recency (2), Legal hierarchy (2)

Question 2:

Option 1: Title relevance (y), Recency (3)

Option 2: Title relevance (n), Recency (1)

Question 3:

Option 1: Legal hierarchy (1), Bibliographical relevance (n)

Option 2: Legal hierarchy (2), Bibliographical relevance (y)

Question 4:

Option 1: Source authority (1, Asser, T&C), Title relevance (n)

Option 2: Source authority (3, blog, news), Title relevance (y)

Question 5:

Option 1: Source authority (1, Asser, T&C), Document type (n)

Option 2: Source authority (2, mid), Document type (y)

Question 6:

Option 1: Source authority (2, mid), Authority author (n)

Option 2: Source authority (3, blog, news), Authority author (y)

Question 7:

Option 1: Document type (y), Bibliographical relevance (n)

Option 2: Document type (n), Bibliographical relevance (y)

A.2 Example query 2

Query: ‘vernietiging overeenkomst terugwerkende kracht’ Translated: ‘voidable contract retroactive effect’

Total number of result: 1325

Question 1:

Option 1: Recency (2), Annotated (n)

Baseline and degraded ranking

This table shows the the difference between the baseline ranking and the degraded ranking. Each row in the table represents one query. Each ranking shown was 10 documents. Each number in the column corresponds with the number of documents for that query that was ranked higher or lower in the degraded model, documents that were not present in the degraded model but replaced by another document, and the number of documents that remained in the same position.

Curriculum Vitae

Gineke Wiggers was born in Hilversum, the Netherlands, in 1988. From 2006 to 2009 she studied european law with a minor in Dutch law at Maastricht University, and in 2011 she obtained a master's degree in Dutch law from the same university. Her master's thesis was entitled The Potential Influence of the Google Book Settlement on Dutch Copyright Holders.

After graduating from university she applied for a PhD, and learned how not to write a research proposal. She has worked as a legal assistant, publishing assistant, customer service agent and business analyst. From her position as business analyst at Legal Intelligence she came up with a new and improved research proposal and submitted it for a PhD in law and data science at Leiden Law School, Leiden University. She started her PhD in 2017, conducting research at eLaw and the data science research program, whilst she continued to work at Legal Intelligence.

Her work has been published in Legal Information Management, proceedings of the European Conference on Information Retrieval, the BIR workshops and the Nederlands Juristenblad.

Acknowledgements

I would like to thank my supervisors, Gerrit-Jan Zwenne and Suzan Verberne, for their support. Aside from all their valuable feedback, they have provided me with two insights that have helped me get this done: (1) the best theses are the ones that are done, and (2) the end product of a PhD is a researcher, not a thesis.

I want to thank the eLaw family for supporting me. Everyone at eLaw is incredibly kind and motivated, making it an amazing place to work. I especially want to thank Pieter for providing me with good coffee and Jenneke for all the moral support.

The Data Science Research Program is an amazing group of PhD students. I feel truly blessed to have been able to work alongside a group of such smart, talented and fun people. I have thoroughly enjoyed the foosball, pub-quizzes, nachos and murder mystery parties. I have learned more about archeology, deep-vein thrombosis, sign language, whiskey and t-SNE maps than I ever imagined. I have also learned programming in Python, and thanks to Wouter now know a little about statistics. Of which I, as an LL.M., am quite proud.

Roel van den Burg has been of tremendous value in this research. He helped me with the second survey and wrote an incredible master thesis about legal IR. I would also like to thank Arjen de Vries for his valuable insights. Alan Hanbury, my ECIR doctoral consortium mentor helped me realise that I needed to go back to the basics with regards to evaluation methods. I want to thank Marc van Opijnen for providing feedback on my very first paper. The BIR, Jurix and legal AIIA communities have been welcoming and inspiring. I look forward to in-person meetings again.

This thesis would not have been possible without the support and data of Legal Intelligence. I particularly want to thank Laurens and Roderick for encouraging to apply, Pieter and Tjerk for their help through the process, and Sjoerd and Stephanie for their endless cheerleading.

Wouter van Loon not only helped me with the statistics in this research, but has also been an endless supporter. For me, he is the best thing I gained from this PhD. I look forward to 'walking with dr. Wouter and dr. Wiggers'.

Last, but certainly not least, I want to thank my family and friends. For their encouragement and support, but also for occasionally reminding me how lucky I am to be able to do this. Your reminders that I am loved, regardless of my title, mean the world to me. This page does not have enough space to tell you how grateful I am to have you in my life.

This thesis is dedicated to my grandmothers Grietje Wiggers-Supèr and Bertie de Hartog-Flinterman. I stand not only on the shoulders of giants [91], but have also been upheld by the strongest women I know.
