

Universiteit
Leiden
The Netherlands

Tracing Shumi: politics and aesthetics in modern Japanese literary discourse and fiction

Meer, A.J. van der

Citation

Meer, A. J. van der. (2024, January 30). Tracing Shumi: politics and aesthetics in modern Japanese literary discourse and fiction. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/3715151>

Version: Publisher's Version

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/3715151>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

Tracing Shumi

Politics and Aesthetics in Modern Japanese Literary Discourse and Fiction

Proefschrift

ter verkrijging van

de graad van doctor aan de Universiteit Leiden, op gezag van rector magnificus prof. dr. ir. H. Bijl, volgens besluit van het college voor promoties

te verdedigen op dinsdag 30 januari 2024

klokke 16.15 uur

door

Arnaud Jurriaan van der Meer

geboren te Voorburg

in 1987

Promotor: Prof. dr. I.B. Smits

Copromotor: Dr. Y. Horsman

Promotiecommissie: Prof. dr. K.J. Cwiertka

Prof. dr. R.E. Breuker

Prof. dr. D.B. Lurie (Columbia University)

Prof. dr. K. Toba (Waseda University)

© 2024, A.J. van der Meer

Cover image by Yuiko Yokota

Dedicated to my parents

Annetje & Ruud

Tracing Shumi: Politics and Aesthetics in Modern Japanese Literary Discourse and Fiction

Acknowledgments	5
Introduction
Shumi and The Distribution of the Sensible in Late 19 th and Early 20 th Century Japan	7
Chapter 1 – Shumi as Self-determination
An Aesthetic Education: (Im)morality and Sensuousness in Mori Ōgai’s Seinen	36
Chapter 2 – Shumi as Beauty
The Art of Seeing: Shumi and the Aesthetic as Social Practice	62
Section I – Mapping the Borderland: Aestheticizing the Everyday in Doppo’s ‘Musashino’	66
Section II – An Ontology of Displacement: The Disintegration of the Aesthetic Ideal in Sōseki’s Kusamakura	90
Chapter 3 – Shumi as Commodity
A Sign of Good Taste: Ōgai, Mitsukoshi, And the Commercialization of a Concept	120
Conclusion
Shumi as Doctrine / Shumi as Liberation?	158
Bibliography	172
Samenvatting	184
Curriculum Vitae	188

Acknowledgments

Writing this dissertation has been one of the most rewarding, but also lonely and tough experiences of my academic career. Of course, a series of lockdowns during the most crucial stages of my research, restricting our freedom to travel, access (re)sources, and meet others, did not help. But despite the solitary nature of the writing process itself, the thoughts and arguments in this thesis were not born in isolation. Below, I would like to thank those who have been closely involved in the development of my project, from the moment the initial idea came to me one afternoon in 2017, sitting on a bench in Morningside Park reading Sōseki's Bungaku hyōron, until its final submission in May 2023.

Many thanks go, first and foremost, to the Isaac Alfred Ailion Foundation, for generously funding my project. Much gratitude also to my advisors Ivo Smits, for taking me on as a pupil, and Yasco Horsman, for his dazzlingly brilliant insights and tireless efforts to make my project better. Although this project came into existence long after my time at Waseda University, I am greatly indebted to my former advisor Nakajima Kunihiko, whose teachings still permeate my work. Toba Kōji, who served as a member of my promotion committee, has remained an invaluable mentor since my time at Waseda and his commentary on my final chapter were pivotal along the long road toward its publication. David Lurie, also a member of my committee, has been a source of inspiration and support during and after my time at Columbia University, as was my cohort – especially Kate Komova, Oliver White, and Maho Miyazaki, and later Stephen Choi – who stood by me during the most disorienting and strenuous years of my life. I feel proud to call them my friends.

More than anything, friendships are what sustained me outside of the many hours of reclusive writing. A special expression of gratitude goes to Marte Boonen, whose presence and support have given me courage and kept me sane over the past five years. Special thanks also to Edwin Michielsen, who has remained a close ally since we met during the introduction week of Japan Studies back in 2005 and without whose lasting friendship I would not have been the scholar I am today. Although he is no longer with us, my gratitude goes to dear friend and brilliant scholar Erik Herber, whose advice gave my project the direction it needed in its early stages and whose camaraderie has made a lasting impact on my life. Many thanks also to friend and mentor Marc Buijnsters, who has always been an unshakable presence since my undergraduate studies at Leiden University. I also want to thank Michiel Hendriksen and Sarah Gagestein, two loyal friends who kept me level-headed in the moments I needed it the most. Special thanks to Giulia Baquè, for her friendship and encouragement in the final stages of writing this dissertation. I also think back fondly to the many inspiring conversations with Aafke van Ewijk, Daphne van der Molen, and Tim de Zeeuw, with whom I shared an office at Leiden University, as well as with Milan van Berlo and Niels van der Salm, who were always prepared to lend their ear to my often incoherent ramblings.

Among the many commentators on my work throughout the years, I want to express special appreciation for the thoughtful words of Reiko Abe Auestad, Jinno Yuki, and Sezaki Keiji, whose receptiveness to my project in its earlier stages gave me the confidence to keep moving forward. I would also like to acknowledge the efforts of the other members of my promotion and opposition committees Remco Breuker, Kasia Cwiertka, Maghiel van Crevel, Looi van Kessel, and Tingting Hui, and thank them for taking the time to read and comment on my dissertation.

Finally, I dedicate this dissertation and the hard work that went into its completion to my dear parents, Annetje and Ruud, who were always there to support me through the difficult moments.