

Universiteit
Leiden

The Netherlands

Disability and its affective affordances: deformity, decay, disruption, distortion

Hiskes, A.R.

Citation

Hiskes, A. R. (2024, April 16). Disability and its affective affordances: deformity, decay, disruption, distortion. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/3736068>

Version: Publisher's Version

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/3736068>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

Disability and Its Affective Affordances

Disability and Its Affective Affordances

Deformity, Decay, Disruption, Distortion

Proefschrift

ter verkrijging van
de graad van doctor aan de Universiteit Leiden, op gezag van rector magnificus prof.dr.ir. H. Bijl, volgens besluit van het college voor promoties
te verdedigen op dinsdag 16 april 2024
klokke 10.00 uur

door

Andries Hiskes
geboren te Gouda
in 1987

Promotor
Prof. dr. F.W.A. Korsten

Copromotor
Dr. J. Sturm

Promotiecommissie
Prof. dr. N. Lawtoo
Prof. dr. M. Boletsi
Prof. dr. E. Brinkema (Massachusetts Institute of Technology)
Dr. L. van Goidsenhoven (Universiteit van Amsterdam)

Cover photograph by Mirjam Devriendt, depicting works of the Plunder / Ekphrasis installation by Berlinde de Bruyckere.

© Andries Hiskes, 2024.

Printed by Ipskamp Printing, Enschede
Typesetting by TAT Zetwerk

Contents

Acknowledgements	VII
1 Introduction	1
1 Thinking with Affordances: The Query of Disability's Legibility	1
2 Disability and Its Paradigms	7
3 Prosodies of Gaps and Bodies: Affect Theory and Disability	15
4 On Reading for Affective Affordances	21
2 Deformity	29
1 Disability and the Affordances of Deformity	29
2 Deformity and the Act of Aesthetic Appraisal	32
3 Prosthetic Performatives: Emotives as Prosthetic Language	39
4 Games of Make-Believe: Performativity and Appearance	43
5 "Stand up!" / "Turn around!": The Affective Sensibility of Agency	55
6 Conclusion	64
3 Decay	67
1 Disability and the Affordances of Decay	67
2 Caesural Cuts: The Literary (in)Articulation of Pain	71
3 Helplessness and Accessorial Alteration	78
4 Objectification and the Self-Harming Body	83
5 Disability, Decay, and the Abject	89
6 Conclusion	96
4 Disruption	99
1 Disability and the Affordances of Disruption	99
2 Dissatisfaction: The Affective Tonality of Disability's Situational Narrative	105
3 Paratactic Disruptions of the Everyday	110
4 A Poetics of Permutability: Attempt, Effort, and Sensible Form	115
5 Enunciation Impaired: Epideictic Events and Poetic Power	124
6 Conclusion	130

5	Distortion	135
1	Disability and the Affordances of Distortion	135
2	Twisting Prolepsis: Anticipation and the “Expected Unexpected”	141
3	Speculative Hesitation: Sensing in an Irresolute World	148
4	Distortion as Engagement: The Changeling and Figurative Conceivability	155
5	Fantastic Disturbances: Assimilative Reading and Disabled Dissimilation	162
6	Conclusion	167
	Conclusion	173
1	Pragmatically Inconvenienced: Disability and the Event of Reading	173
	Bibliography	187
	Summary in Dutch	195
	Curriculum Vitae	203

Acknowledgements

Writing and composing this book has been an undertaking that I could have only accomplished with the support of all the people and institutions that have nurtured my creativity and curiosity. Frans-Willem Korsten and I met some 10 years ago, started working together more intensely a year later, and have continued to do so since. Frans-Willem taught me not only the fundamental skills of a literary scholar; he also taught me much about teaching itself, and how to adapt yourself to each student. Throughout, we have shared a love for the adventures of ideas that, I hope, we'll continue to pursue in the future. Jules Sturm was pivotal in introducing me to cultural disability studies. Without their support and feedback, this book would not have been as svelte and thorough as it became.

I thank the Dutch Research Council for funding this project. In addition, this project could not have been done without the support and space I received from my colleagues at THUAS. I warmly thank the following people for their invaluable support: Meralda Slager for bringing me on board the nursing department and her belief in the added value of disability studies for nursing studies. Zsuzsu Tavy for her encouragement, dear friendship, and the many hours working on participation together throughout the years. Sam Schrevel for his continued eagerness to think through the politics of higher education together. Tom Maassen for jointly embarking on the journey of thinking of care in aesthetic terms. And Liesbeth Geuze and Anita Ham for sharing in the adventure that is a PhD.

My gratitude goes to the revolving cast of characters compromising the Change Management research group throughout the years. You have been a safe little canoe among the looming battleships of research grants and institutional politics. Sandra, Dominique, Fer, Zunaica, Kim, Paul, Wypkje, Marjolijn and, of course, my cultural analysis buddy Ohad: thank you for all your help and feedback throughout the years.

At Leiden, I extend my thanks to LUCAS for providing a welcoming environment for my research. I am deeply grateful to all my colleagues at the Film- and Literary Studies department, many of whom have also been my teachers. You were ever ready to offer support whenever I needed it. My thanks goes to the LUCAS PhD community and its willingness to make Leiden a welcoming place. I thank Aafje de Roest for co-navigating both the writing of a dissertation and the journey of an early-career scholar with me, making it a more enjoyable experience and consistently highlighting the importance of literary studies for society. I am thankful to Nick Tomberge for the countless laughs shared and his uncanny ability to relativize what it means, or should mean, to work at a university.

OSL and NICA were helpful in introducing me to many opportunities and seminars throughout the years. I am indebted to Isobel Armstrong for her insightful feedback on earlier drafts of this book. I deeply appreciate Jonathan Culler and Daniel Heller-Roazen for their readiness to brainstorm with me on questions posed by the book during my stay at Cornell. I owe a great deal to Eugenie Brinkema for her ongoing discussions and education on all aspects of form(alism). I thank Alice Schippers, Jacqueline Kool, and Sofie Sergeant for introducing me to Disability Studies In Nederland and the growing network of people, researchers, and organizations associated with it. You continue to inspire me to advance a field and topic that so often is still treated, unjustly, as an afterthought.

I am grateful to Olivier van Hoore for his continuous push for creativity and our shared ceaseless desire to make new things. My gratitude goes to Rasmus, Petra, Pelle, and Chris for opening their home to me and always giving me a warm welcome. My thanks goes to my family, that has been a continuous source of encouragement for this project, steadfast even through our shared challenges over the years. To my mother, who instilled in me an appreciation for aesthetics and politics; to my father, who consistently emphasized the importance of justice; to my brother, for fostering a culture of reading since we were little; and to Monique, for all her care.

Finally, this dissertation is dedicated to Jacco van Uden. For the past eight years, Jacco has repeatedly gone above and beyond to support my research interests. His assistance in securing funding, involving me in inspiring (if bizarre) projects, and offering guidance has proven invaluable to the success of this project. He has helped shape my understanding of what it means to work with a body. Most importantly, Jacco's unwavering willingness to assist those with promising ideas continues to inspire me. While I can never repay his generosity, I aim to emulate his support to others in my future endeavors. Thank you.