Appendix III: Codebook Chapter Six

Name	Description
Challenges	The practical and normative challenges of judicial reform
Anti-corruption	How digitisation and automation can contribute to anti-corruption efforts.
Improving (procedural) oversight	One mechanism through which the judiciary tries to reduce corruption is by increasing and improving mechanisms of oversight through, e.g., new and stricter procedures and stricter enforcement.
General consistency vs considering individual cases	A consistent challenge of China's judicial reform has been to find an equilibrium between judicial consistency (same judgment for same cases) and acknowledging the uniqueness of every legal case.
Considering local differences
Humans are fallible	A central starting point of judicial digitisation and automation; influenced by the Marxist ideal of rational governance.
Improving efficiency	Efficiency means more output with less input.
Reducing human element	Reducing or limiting human discretionary decision-making in the judicial process through digitisation and automation.
Goals	The normative goals of smart courts
Procedural Justice	Relating to formalities and procedures
Consistency
Absence of oversight leads to unfairness
Digitisation as a gateway	Digitisation helps improve procedural justice by strengthening consistency.
Enforcing procedures

Name	Description
Equalising online and offline	Online and offline procedures and documents have the same legal validity.
Improving decision-making
Promoting consistency
Standardising judicial outcomes
Standardising power	Clarifying and formalising responsibilities and duties of each position in courts.
Standardising practices	Clarifying and formalising practices, i.e., actions and measures, one may undertake in specific situations.
Standardising sentencing
External visibility
Increasing visibility of justice
Informing parties	Informing parties about the technicalities of online litigation, their rights during an online process, etc.
Informing and guiding parties
Informing parties about their rights
Protecting rights	The protection of rights during the judicial process.

Name	Description
Giving parties the freedom of choice
Protecting data and information
Protecting privacy and neutrality
Protecting the right to a trial
Standardising litigation
Internal accountability	Increasing and improving internal accountability
Centralising court work
Clarifying responsibilities
Clarifying rules
Correct oversight is a prerequisite	The idea that correct (political) oversight is a prerequisite to a "fair" outcome in a judicial process.
Digitisation as a gateway
Enforcing procedures
Oversight
Enhancing judicial activities

Name	Description
Facilitating court work
Holistic oversight	An all-round, all-encompassing way of oversight that covers every node in the judicial process from beginning until end.
Improving (procedural) oversight
Improving accountability
Improving procedural transparency
Self-discipline	Digitisation and automation foster self-correction and self-discipline among its users.
Facilitating court work	Smart courts make the judicial process easier which is an incentive for judges to use it.
Improving (procedural) oversight
Substantive Justice	Relating to substantive outcomes of the judicial process
CCP Legitimacy
Enhancing judicial activities
Ensuring fairness
Giving discretion to the court
Choosing online litigation under certain conditions

Name	Description
Moving to offline
Holistic oversight
Strengthening political loyalty
Strengthening party leadership
Individuality as access	This concerns the provision of access to a legitimate venue of airing grievances, functioning as a safety valve to let out pressure from society. It is a provision for the faceless masses, i.e., the poor and powerless (because the rich and powerful would never use the courts, rather internal party mechanisms). Provision of access is not only formal and passive (letting the people come to justice), but bringing justice to the people (through smart courts and propagating).
Accommodating different needs
Consent
Getting implicit consent
Getting informed consent
Isolating consent
Needing consent
Withdrawing consent

Name	Description
Facilitating the judicial process
Providing more convenient services
Improving access to justice
Individuality as social stability	The fact smart courts allow for individual rights and try to accommodate individual needs, is not so much motivated by liberal principles of individual rights, but rather from a concern with social stability for the collective. This is in line with the literature of the Chinese conception of "fairness" and "justice" as a collective concept.
Accommodating different needs
Consent
Getting implicit consent
Getting informed consent
Isolating consent
Needing consent
Withdrawing consent
Considering local differences

Name	Description
Contesting matters of procedure
Ensuring fairness

Losing rights	Individual rights are only relevant as long as they serve the collective goals of social stability and prosperity.
Protecting rights
Giving parties the freedom of choice
Protecting data and information
Protecting privacy and neutrality
Protecting the right to a trial
Standardising litigation
Unifying procedural and substantive justice
Consolidating judicial reform
Following procedures closely

Curriculum Vitae

Straton Papagiannas was born on April 25, 1994, in Brussels, Belgium. He lived in Cyprus before returning to Belgium in 1998. In 2012, he began his bachelor's degree in Sinology at the Catholic University of Leuven. During the summer of 2014, he attended a summer program at Shanghai Jiao Tong University, where he was first introduced to Chinese law. For his final undergraduate year, he participated in an Erasmus exchange at Ruprecht-Karls-Universität in Heidelberg, where he also completed his Master's in Sinology in 2017.

After obtaining his MA, Straton pursued a Postgraduate Certificate in Economic Diplomacy at the Brussels Diplomatic Academy, including an internship at a law firm in Shanghai. In 2018, he moved to Wuhan to study International Law at Wuhan University, completing this program in 2019.

In the summer of 2019, Straton relocated to the Netherlands to begin his PhD in Chinese Studies at Leiden University. His research was conducted at the Institute for Area Studies, the Van Vollenhoven Institute, and eLaw – Center for Law and Digital Technologies. His PhD work was challenged by the global COVID-19 pandemic, which impeded his ability to conduct research visits to China. During this period, he moved to Paris for personal reasons in 2020 and returned to Leiden in 2022. He completed his PhD in early 2023 after a research stay at Griffith University in Australia. Throughout his PhD journey, he published several articles, book chapters, and various works for a broader audience.

Besides his research, Straton was an editor for projects like the Mapping China Journal, the China Guiding Cases Project, and Sinotalks. He was also engaged in teaching and supervision, focusing on courses related to Chinese governance, law, and politics.

Currently, Straton works as a Study Coordinator at the Faculty of Humanities at Leiden University. He also works part-time as a boxing coach.
