

Universiteit
Leiden
The Netherlands

Women, family, and litigation in nineteenth-century Chongqing
Xin, J.

Citation

Xin, J. (2024, September 17). Women, family, and litigation in nineteenth-century Chongqing. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/4083625>

Version: Publisher's Version

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/4083625>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

Acknowledgments

First and foremost, I remain grateful to my supervisor, Manon van der Heijden, for her unwavering guidance and support throughout this dissertation journey. Her expertise, patience, and encouragement have been instrumental in navigating numerous challenges, ensuring the successful completion of this work.

A sincere thanks to my co-supervisor, Jeroen Duindam, for his meticulous reading and insightful comments on the drafts, which have significantly enriched the quality of this research.

Special thanks are extended to my doctoral committee members, whose comprehensive reviews and comments have propelled my thinking forward and injected new energy into my research.

To my dearest friend in Leiden, Tan Yujing, or Tuotuo, I am deeply thankful for her invaluable academic advice and unwavering support, which provided both intellectual guidance and emotional comfort. Yujing and her husband, Meng Haoqi, are experimenting an ideal way of marital life, I wish they will always be happy together.

My appreciation goes to Yixiu and Zexu, whose companionship during shared meals and game nights provided much-needed relaxation during my Ph.D. studies. Interactions with them also deepened my understanding of religion and feminism. Additionally, I am grateful to Yiyun and Sanhua for introducing me to a new way of life and for the cherished moments we shared together.

At the dinner parties Guanmian and Jihui organized, I got the chance to know most of my friends in Leiden. I benefited from the reading group organized by Guanmian and Tuotuo, where I learned a lot from Ma Xiao, Wei Ning, and other participants. Also, Guanmian's optimism and passion for academia always inspired me during the lonely journey for doing Ph.D.

I would like to express my gratitude to Hilde de Weert for organizing the seminar on Chinese history, where I had the opportunity to establish meaningful connections and friendships. In particular, I am thankful for the friendships formed with Hu Jing, Jialong, Xiong, and Yuning, whose conversations have enriched my academic perspectives. Lin Fan offered invaluable support and guidance when I need it the most.

I am indebted to a group of scholars, Chen Xiao, Chen Zhe, Stephine Painter, Zhao Mengdie, and Yao Ping who generously invited me to join the panel in academic conferences, providing valuable feedback and fostering a sense of community within the academic sphere. Du Yue and Chen Li, as the commentators of the conference panel, gave precise suggestions on my papers and dissertation.

In the Posthumus research school, I found a way to start my research step by step, where I received useful suggestions in the beginning of writing. Also, I am happy to know Bente De Leede, Sophie Rose, Cao Junhao and Wang Meimei in the courses.

I am grateful to Zhang Tiantian for diligently reviewing my chapters and identifying serious mistakes, thereby contributing to the refinement of this work.

My appreciation also extends to my colleagues in the office, Sander and Ajeng, during my first year in Leiden, for their camaraderie and support.

I am deeply thankful to Wen Shanshan, whose presence provided immense comfort and assistance during my most challenging moment, despite our limited interactions.

I wish to acknowledge The Sorcerer's Apprentice, MTC Official and Still Xiaozhi, whose videos and live streams on Bilibili served as an important source of companionship throughout the writing process.

It is difficult for me to express my appreciation to Patrick for his unwavering support, especially during the challenging times of lockdown. Regardless of what the future holds, Henk, Willy, and Leonie will always have a special place in my heart as my family in the Netherlands.

Last, I wish to express my gratitude to my parents and all families, no matter when and where, I will remember your love and support. You have always been understanding and have helped me in every way. 最后要感谢我的父母与家人，无论何时，我都会记住你们的爱与支持。你们一直包容我，用自己的方式给了我一切支持。

I cannot write all the names who have given me help, encouragement, and confidence on this difficult journey, but I am deeply grateful to every one of you.

Curriculum Vitae

Jiayi Xin was born on November 11, 1992 in Zhaoyuan, China. She received her bachelor degree in law from China Foreign Affairs University in 2015. Then she got her master degree in Comparative and Public History from Chinese University of Hong Kong in 2016. Life at CUHK sparked her interest in academic research, so she decided to pursue a PhD. Being awarded the CSC scholarship, she came to Leiden University and started her PhD research about women from Ba County Archives during nineteenth century in July 2017. During her doctoral project, she participated in academic conferences and delivered presentations in ISCLH 2021 Biannual Conference and 2023 AAS Annual Conference.