ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I especially want to thank Professor E.J. van Alphen not only for accepting me as a student but for the decisive contribution he made to my research, always getting me out of theoretical difficulties with clarity and elegance. I also want to thank him for his kindness and willingness to help me at all times. I also thank Professor María Boletsi for her great kindness and understanding, the effectiveness of her suggestions, comments and corrections and the general guidance she provided me during all these years. This book would not have been possible without the constant support of both of them. I am also grateful Professor Cinthia Wanschelbaum for her supportive and understanding attitude and her specific theoretical contributions that protected me from several inaccuracies.

I appreciate the Department of Science and Technology of the National University of Luján, which granted me the Research Scholarship that allowed the financing of this doctoral project. In a very special way I want to thank Gabriel Inzaurre for the role he played in this thesis. His classes on art and politics and his help as a simultaneous translator and proofreader have been crucial to solving the different problems of this work. The contributions of the historian Paula Spregelburd have been of fundamental importance in the area of History of Education. There are those who accompanied me at work and in friendship: the Educational Theories Team II and the Department of Education of the National University of Luján, Claudia Soro, Emiliano Cuevas, Adrián Vicente, Rosana Ponce, Paula Morayta and Yamila Pochet. A notable mention goes to Marisela Trevin and Federico Gascón, managers of the translation tasks and the English classes.

A thesis demands a lot from the family environment. I want to mention here my brothers Eduardo and Andrés and, with enormous gratitude, my daughters Nadia and Lucía for the patience they have had with me and the help they have given me throughout these very complicated years. Finally, I want to thank my mother, Professor Ada Morandi, and my father, the historian Jorge Saab whose advice has been invaluable. This work is dedicated to them.
