

Universiteit
Leiden
The Netherlands

The teaching of Khety and its use as an educational tool in ancient Egypt

Jurjens, J.

Citation

Jurjens, J. (2024, October 23). The teaching of Khety and its use as an educational tool in ancient Egypt. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/4105205>

Version: Publisher's Version

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/4105205>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

The Teaching of Khety

&

Its Use as an Educational Tool
in Ancient Egypt

The work in this thesis was supported by a grant from the Dutch Research Council (NWO).

Copyright © 2024 by Judith Jurjens. All rights reserved.

Cover design: Judith Jurjens and Jenne Hoekstra

Cover figure: Part of a relief from the tomb of Kaemrehu in Saqqara (CG 1534).

The Teaching of Khety and Its Use as an Educational Tool in Ancient Egypt

Proefschrift

ter verkrijging van

de graad van doctor aan de Universiteit Leiden, op gezag van rector magnificus prof.dr.ir. H. Bijl, volgens besluit van het college voor promoties

te verdedigen op woensdag 23 oktober 2024

klokke 14.30 uur

door

Judith Jurjens

geboren te Nieuw-Buinen

in 1980

Promotor: Prof. dr. O.E. Kaper

Copromotor: Dr. R.J. Demarée

Promotiecommissie: Prof. dr. G.R. van den Berg

Dr. J. van Dijk (Rijksuniversiteit Groningen)

Prof. dr. F.N. Hagen (University of Copenhagen)

Prof. dr. R.B. Parkinson (University of Oxford)

Table of Contents

Preface

PART ONE: TEXT

1. Introduction to the text	3
1.1 Previous research on The Teaching of Khety	3
1.1.1 Early scholarship	3
1.1.2 Editions and translations	6
1.2 A new synoptic text	8
2. List of Sources	11
2.1 Papyri	11
2.2 Ostraca	14
2.3 Writing tablets	64
2.4 Dipinti	65
3. Synoptic text	67
Notes to the synoptic text	249

PART TWO: CONTEXT

4. Introduction to the context	273
4.1 The Teaching of Khety and education	273
4.2 Material philology	274
4.3 Outline of part two of the thesis	274
5. Section one: Paratextual features	277
5.1 “Dates on Literary Ostraca”	279
Zeitschrift für Ägyptische Sprache und Altertumskunde 148 (1): 83–91
5.2 “The Scribes Who Wrote Khety: Some Remarks on Colophons and Scribal Education”	291
Chronique d'Égypte 95 (190): 220–235
5.3 “The Educational Context of a Literary Text: Some Notes on Writing Exercises and Drawings as Found on Material Containing The Teaching of Khety”	309
Journal of the American Research Center in Egypt 57: 175–196
5.4 “Corrections on Ostraca: a Look into an Ancient Egyptian Scribal Practice”	333
Studien zur Altägyptischen Kultur 50: 189–205

6. Section two: Close readings	353
6.1 “The Teaching of Khety Twice: A New Reading of oBM EA 65597 as a School Exercise”	355
Journal of Egyptian Archaeology 105 (1): 127–134
6.2 “An Unpublished Manuscript of The Teaching of Khety (P. Turin CGT 54019)”	365
Rivista del Museo Egizio 5: 109–128
7. The Teaching of Khety as an educational tool	387
7.1 To what extent do the material objects represent school exercises?	387
7.2 Educational environment	391
7.3 The curriculum	394
7.3.1 Middle Egyptian texts	396
7.3.2 Late Egyptian texts	397
7.3.3 Other subjects	399
7.3.4 Scripts	400
7.4 Scribal practices	401
7.4.1 Dates	401
7.4.2 Corrections	402
7.4.3 Writing exercises	403
7.5 Didactic methods	403
Abbreviations	409
Bibliography	411
Appendix A	423
Index of sources discussed in the articles
Appendix B	427
Concordance list of chapter numbers as they appear in previous editions
Appendix C	431
oBerlin P. 14934: The excerpts of The Teaching of Amenemhat and The Hymn to the Nile
Plates	433
Samenvatting (Summary in Dutch)	451
Acknowledgements	455
Curriculum Vitae	457

Preface

The thesis that lies before you concerns The Teaching of Khety, a Middle Egyptian literary poem, also known as The Satire of the Trades. Both these titles are modern designations. The composition actually begins with the words: “Beginning of the teaching (sbꜣy.t) that a man from Sile, named Khety, son of Duauf, made for his son, named Pepi”. This introductory formula is typical for texts that belong to what Egyptologists call the genre of wisdom literature. Judging by the large number of surviving sources, The Teaching of Khety was the most popular of all the “Teachings” or “Instructions”. Hundreds of ostraca (i.e. pottery shards and pieces of limestone used for writing or drawing) containing excerpts of the text are known, as well as various papyri, writing tablets and dipinti.

In the poem Khety travels to the Residence to enrol his son Pepi in school. As they sail south, the father wants to teach his son the benefits of being a scribe. Therefore, he describes the hardships of various other professions, such as that of reed-cutter and fisherman, and contrasts these with the leisurely life of the scribe. The father’s goal is to convince his son to do his best in school and become a scribe. The description of the manual professions constitutes about two-thirds of the composition. In the second (shorter) half, Khety advises Pepi on the rules of everyday conduct, for example how to behave properly when dining with someone of higher rank.

Part one of this thesis focuses on the TEXT of The Teaching of Khety. It presents a new synoptic text edition that includes several new sources, some of which are still awaiting publication. This part of the dissertation ties in with the “old” philological tradition.

Part two sets as its aim to study the CONTEXT of Khety. It focuses on the social environment in which the text was written, in this case how it was used as an educational tool in ancient Egypt. This part is inspired by “new” or “material” philology, which urges to look beyond the text itself, and also to take into consideration the material object (such as a papyrus or an ostrakon) on which the text was applied. According to material philology, the study of the material aspects and layout of manuscripts will shed light on their social and historical context.

Part two is presented in the form of a thesis-by-publication, consisting of six articles all published in peer-reviewed Egyptological journals. The articles themselves are grouped into two interrelated sections. The first section comprises four articles. These discuss paratextual features that sometimes appear on material objects in addition to the text itself: dates, colophons, corrections, drawings and writing exercises. The second section consists of two articles, each focusing on a single object. They offer a “close reading” of these objects (the first an ostrakon, the second a papyrus), thus providing insight in the (educational) context of Khety.