⁵⁶ pBM EA 10775e and pBM EA 10775f do not belong to the same papyrus, although they were mounted into the same frame. The handwriting of the two fragments differs considerably. Moreover, pBM EA 10775e actually joins pAmherst XIV, whereas pBM EA 10775e does not. From Fischer-Elfert's publication (1998) it may appear that the *Khet*y excerpt is found on the verso of pBM EA 10775e and pBM EA 10775f. However, the recto and verso Fischer-Elfert's mentions do not in fact refer to the papyrus fragments themselves, but to the back and front of the frame in which they were mounted, together with four other fragments (three in the front and three in the back).

10) pChester Beatty V = pBM EA 10685 (British Museum, London)

Excerpt: §28,5–§30,5

Date: Ramesside Period (perhaps Merenptah or Seti II)

Provenance: Deir el-Medina, library of Qenherkhepshef (Hagen 2019b: 277–292)

Bibliography: Gardiner 1935: 46, pl. 23; Quack 2003: 183–184 n. 14

Online: https://www.britishmuseum.org/collection/object/Y_EA10685-1

11) pChester Beatty XIX = pBM EA 10699 (British Museum, London)

Excerpt: §12,3–§14,1

Date: Ramesside Period

Provenance: Deir el-Medina, library of Qenherkhepshef (Hagen 2019b: 277–292)

Bibliography: Gardiner 1935: 132, pl. 72; Brunner 1944; Helck 1970; Jäger 2004

Online: https://www.britishmuseum.org/collection/object/Y_EA10699-1

12) pSallier II = pBM EA 10182 (British Museum, London)

Excerpt: §1,1–Colophon

Date: Year 1 of Seti II (e.g. Helck 1969: 105; Ragazzoli 2012: 226)

Provenance: Probably Saqqara, perhaps from a tomb (Quirke 1996: 391; Ragazzoli 2012: 230–231); see also Widmaier 2013: 507 n. a)

Bibliography: Hawkins 1841–1844, I: pls X–XXIII; Maspero 1872: 48–73; Budge 1923: pls LXIII–LXXVI; Piankoff 1933; Brunner 1944; Helck 1970; Jäger 2004

13) pTurin CGT 54019 (Museo Egizio, Turin)

Excerpt: §21,4–Colophon

Date: 20th dynasty (after Ramesses III)

Provenance: Probably Thebes / Deir el-Medina

Bibliography: Jurjens 2021d

<https://papyri.museoegizio.it/o/287>

14) pTurin CGT 54020 (Museo Egizio, Turin)

Excerpt: §30,1–§30,5⁵⁷

Date: 20th dynasty

Provenance: Probably Thebes / Deir el-Medina

Bibliography: Unpublished (see Roccati 2022: 40)

Online: <https://papyri.museoegizio.it/o/288>

⁵⁷ While not exactly the same, there are some noticeable similarities between pTurin CGT 54019 and pTurin CGT 54020.

Both papyri share some variants that are not otherwise attested:  (§30,2);  and  (§30,3). pTurin CGT 54019 may also have once contained the same unique phrase as pTurin CGT 54020 (see page 268).

Furthermore, the palaeography of the sign  (A 21) looks very similar, especially the shape of the headdress:  (pTurin CGT 54020, verso, line 3) and  (pTurin CGT 54019, III,x+5). As a result, it is likely that these two papyri have the same provenance and perhaps even shared the same Vorlage, although both were written by different scribes, as evidenced by the differences in handwriting.

⁶² Most likely this ostrakon can be identified as the one referred to by Posener (1975: 108 n. 15) as “un grand O. Berlin calcaire sans numéro, inédit”, containing both Khetȝ and Amenemhat. No other unpublished ostrakon with both poems is known in the Berlin collection (personal comment V. Lepper). ⁶³ Dorn 2011: 447. The join cannot be verified with certainty, because oMünchen ÄS 3787 is now lost (see below). Therefore I have included both ostraca separately in the synoptic text.

⁶⁴ I thank Rob Demarée for giving me access to his notes on oCairo SR 1702, oCairo SR 1724 and oCairo SR 1838.

⁶⁵ In Černý's notebook the ostrakon consists of two separate pieces. The left piece is now missing. It is probably located in the Cairo Museum, but it is not part of the inventory number Cairo SR 1838.

⁶⁸ M. Müller (2009: 48–49; 2014: 144–146) argues that this ostrakon (“K 118”) possibly joins with oUC 31935, which was also found in the mortuary temple of Merenptah. However, full-size prints of both ostraca reveal that they do not match. In addition, the handwriting on oMerenptah Kat. Nr. 3 is much larger than the one on oUC 31935.

⁶⁹ oMerenptah Kat. Nr. 6 is possibly a piece of the same ostrakon as oMerenptah Kat. Nr. 7 (M. Müller in the forthcoming catalogue of the ostraca found in the mortuary temple of Merenptah).

⁷⁰ oMerenptah Kat. Nr. 7 is possibly a piece of the same ostrakon as oMerenptah Kat. Nr. 6 (M. Müller in the forthcoming catalogue of the ostraca found in the mortuary temple of Merenptah).

⁷¹ I would like to thank Evgeniya Anokhina and Natalia Makeeva for pointing out the Khety ostraca in the Pushkin Museum to me and for allowing me to study them before publication.

⁷² Or possibly §15,3–§15,4 (see page 259).

⁷⁴ See above, note 63. The München ostracon was destroyed in a bombardment during World War II (Helck 1970: 7).
