

Universiteit
Leiden
The Netherlands

Vulnerable yet resilient: representations of migrant workers in contemporary Chinese prose

Liu, S.

Citation

Liu, S. (2024, December 3). Vulnerable yet resilient: representations of migrant workers in contemporary Chinese prose. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/4170525>

Version: Publisher's Version

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/4170525>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

Curriculum Vitae

Liu Shuang began her training in Chinese Language and Literature at Fudan University in 2011. Her research is motivated by a deep interest in exploring the human experiences and stories behind migration. From August 2016 until August 2018, she studied Asian American Literature at Maryland University, focusing on the works of Asian American migrant writers. In 2019, she was admitted as a PhD student at Leiden University Institute for Area Studies, studying the literary representation of migrant workers in China. Her research has appeared in and will soon appear in several peer reviewed outlets: Bochum Yearbook of East Asian Studies (2022), Literature and Modern China, and China Perspectives.